LAMOUREUX JURY DISAGREES

NO VERDICT IN HIS CASE.

Latest photograph of Representative S. John Lamoureux, charged with accepting a bribe to influence his vote.

After All Night Discussion Reports Inability to Reach Verdict, and Is Discharged—Was Out Since Four O'clock Yesterday Afternoon.

The expected happened in the trial of Representative S. John Lamoureux. At 11:30 o'clock to-day the jury that had his case under consderation since 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon reported to Judge Bond that they were unable to agree.

Judge Bond, after expressing his regret at the disagreement, dismissed them. This puts the sensational bribery case back just where it was before the expensive trial was begun.

It was remarked to-day about the corridors of the courthouse that nobing else had been expected all along but a disagreement. Rumors to this effect began to fly about immediately after the jury retired to consider the case. As hour after hour passed without any intimation that an agreement had been reached, the belief that twelve men would never be of one opinion became stronger.

It was unofficially announced that the jury stood 9 to 3 for acquittal.

LAMOUREUX HEARS REPORT.

Lamoureux was in court when the result of the trial was announced. He said that he was disappointed because he had not been acquitted. He was tried on a charge of having accepted a bribe of $180 handed to him by William H. McMasters, for his influence against the leased shoe machinery bill, which to-day became a law by the affixing of the Governor's signature.

Foreman O'Kane of the jury, at 11 o'clock to-day, sent a communication to Judge Bond in which he announced that the jury had been unable to agree. Half an hour later Judge Bond sent for the jury and the twelve men came into court.

"Have you been able to agree?" Judge Bond asked the foreman.

"We have not," replied Mr. O'Kane.

JUDGE DISMISSES JURY.

"I am very sorry," said Judge Bond, "that you have been unable to reach an agreement, as this case has cost the government a great deal of money. I will dismiss you from further service, as this is the last case on the list."

The jury then left the court room.

At 9:30 to-day the jury came into court and asked for instructions. When they reached the trial room, Foreman O'Kane passed a paper to Court Officer McDonough, who in turn passed it to Judge Bond.

For several minutes the judge perused the contents of the paper, and then leaned over toward the attorneys' table and said: "You have the testimony Mr. Dwyer, will you give it to me."

"What testimony?" asked Mr. Dwyer.

"Any testimony you have," replied his honor.

DWYER SURRENDERS TESTIMONY

Then Judge Bond called Attorney Dennison, Attorney Cassidy and Assistant District-Attorney Dwyer, and a conference began which lasted many minutes.

Suddenly Assistant District Attorney Dwyer left the court, and within two or three minutes returned with most of the typewritten testimony taken during the trial.

The evidence the jury desires to read over is that which deals with the conversation between William H. McMasters, the Government's principal witness against Lamoureux, and District Attorney Moran, when McMasters called on him on the first Wednesday at his apartments in the Hotel Navarre.

Judge Bond read the testimony of McMasters in which he told of his first visit to the District Attorney.

His honor also read the testimony of Inspector Armstrong in which he related what he overheard when hidden in the closet in McMasters's office on March 4.

It was exactly 3:50 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the jury retired in charge of Deputy Sheriff Joseph Paine and Court Officer Michael J. McDonough, and went directly to room A on the Somerset street side of the Court House to begin their deliberations.

A crowd had collected in the lower corridors, and displayed a desire to follow the jury to the corridor outside of room A, but this was not permitted.

Lamoureux and his counsel, Mr. Dennison, were allowed to go to this corridor and remained there until 4:45 o'clock last night when they, accompanied by Mrs. Dennison, who had been in the court room all afternoon, went to the Dennison home to pass the night.

Judge Left Court Early.

Conspicuous among those who remained around the court building until late in the evening, apparently deeply interested in the jury's verdict, were John P. Feeney, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, Edward B. Barry of the Governor's Council and Attorney Thomas Proctor.

Judge Bond remained in the court until 5:30 o'clock, and then went home for the night, after instructing the jury through the court officers to seal their verdict if they reached one.

Assistant District Attorney Dwyer, who had charge of the prosecution of Lamoureux, left the Court House shortly after the jury retired, and left Hugh Doherty, of the District Attorney's office, to represent that official.

Mr. Doherty stayed in the court building until 1 o'clock this morning.

Frequently during the night the voices of the jurymen, excitedly debating, could be heard distinctly in the corridor outside their room, and a dozen times the foreman was heard pounding for order.

Looking tired after their night's deliberations, the jury went to the Revere House at 7 o'clock this morning, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Paine and Court Officer McDonough.

They returned to the jury room at 8 o'clock, and until they left for the court room at 9:30 o'clock scarcely a sound came from them.

3 CHINESE PROVINCES, 50,000 MEN IN REVOLT

MUTINY SPREADING RAPIDLY; ALARM FELT FOR FOREIGNERS' SAFETY.

HONGKONG, June 1.—Three provinces are now affected by the Chinese revolt and the uprising is growing every day. A conservative estimate of the strength of the armed rebels places the number at 50,000. Some reports received here indicate double that number of men actually in arms.

Kiangsi is the latest province to be affected. A message from Nan-Ngan to-day says that an outbreak has occurred forty miles north of that city. Officials were attacked. It is reported a dozen civilian and military authorities and their families were killed.

Kwangsi province is also threatened with a serious revolt. The southern boundary of the province is close to Lien-Chow, where there was a violent outbreak early in the week, resulting in an attack on a German mission station.

At Pakhol, the port of Lien-Chow, all white women have been ordered away by the British consul. Every white man in the city has been pressed into service to stand guard over the consulates.

In Kwang-Tung province, where the uprising started, the situation is reported as growing graver all the time. Practically the entire coast from here to Amoy is now patrolled by launches and small steamers ready to succor the needy in case of an attack. Vessels stopping at the ports in this strip of land have received alarming reports as to outbreaks in the interior. Few details of such disturbances are obtainable.

Alarming reports continue to reach here from Amoy telling of the depredations of the 30,000 armed rebels. Practically the whole southern part of Fokine province is said to be controlled by them.

WASHINGTON URGES CONSULS TO GUARD AMERICANS IN PERIL

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Officials of the Washington Government are watching developments in China with undisguised anxiety lest the outbreaks suddenly be directed against foreigners.

Following a cable report from United States Consul Paddock at Amoy, the State Department has sent him instructions to keep the Government thoroughly posted on the situation.

It appears that the trouble has spread in the past few days and that the mutiny of the Chinese soldiers is growing stronger. The official news is very meagre, but it is said that American interests are not involved.

Both Consul Paddock and Rear Admiral Dayton, commanding the Asiatic squadron, have been given authority to act on their own judgment in case of emergency. In the event that Americans should become imperilled the consul would at once communicate with the gunboat Helena, which is now patrolling the coast about Swatow and Amoy.

Nearly every vessel of the Asiatic squadron is now in the vicinity of the Chinese coast. The flagship West Virginia, with the Maryland and Colorado, are still visiting Japanese ports on their way to Chefoo for the regular Summer target practice.

Governor Guild Ends Bitter Legislative War

SIGNS SHOE MACHINE BILL

Governor Guild to-day signed the Leased Shoe Machinery bill at 9:25 o'clock, and the measure is now a law. The bill finally passed the Senate yesterday afternoon by a vote of 21 to 15. It was one of the most bitterly contested bills that has come before the Legislature of this State for many years.

This law breaks the grip of the powerful Shoe Machinery Trust on the manufacturers ofshoes in this State. After the Governor had affixed his signature to the bill he issued a statement in which it was declared that he had remained up during the greater part of the night stduiyng the testimony and arguments on the measure. He found no reason, the statement said, for vetoing the bill. The Governor had five days' time in which to take action. This is the statement that was given out at the Governor's office:

Governor's Statement.

"Yesterday afternoon, soon after the bill was sent to the Governor from the Senate, a party of fifteen shoeworkers, headed by President John S. Tobin of the Boot and Shoeworkers' Union, called upon Governor Guild and requested him to veto the bill. As a result of their visit the Governor sent for the stenographic report of the testimony presented to the committee on judiciary at its hearing on the bill and spent the great part of the night reading the testimony and the arguments of counsel. After a careful study the Governor failed to find any reason why he should veto the bill, and he accordingly affixed his signature this forenoon."

About Tobin's Stand.

The statement of the Governor with reference to the visit of union shoemakers last evening caused a surprise to many to-day, in view of the fact that it had been reported that President John F. Tobin of the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union was not interested one way or the other in the fight.

Representative Arthur F. Mason of Haverhill, who was prominent in the House as a worker for the Shoe Machinery bill, called upon Governor Guild to-day and showed the Governor a letter, which he left with the Governor at the latter's request. This letter is alleged to have been written by President Tobin some time ago at the request of prominent labor union men in the city of Springfield.

Representative Mason said to-day that the letter declared that the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union had no direct interest in the Shoe Machinery bill one way or the other, and was not a party to this legislation one way or the other.

Trouble Over Union Stamp.

John F. Tobin, president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, declared to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"I headed a delegation of members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union to call

Mrs. George Gould to Expose Plot to Ruin Sister-in-Law's Name

ATTEMPT TO BRIBE "BIG" BILL HAWLEY TO SWEAR HE MARRIED MISS CLEMMONS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—A startling plot to discredit Mrs. Howard Gould, when as Katherine Clemmons, her engagement to young Howard Gould became known and to make her marriage impossible, will be exposed by Mrs. George Gould when the now celebrated scandal is aired in court according to statements to-day. Mrs. George Gould is expected to tell of an effort made to bribe William Carroll Woodward, known to the police as "Big Hawley," to swear that he was married to Mrs. Gould in the West before her beauty and talent made her a stage favorite. Hawley himself will corroborate Mrs. Gould with a statement which he has made already to the AMERICAN. Hawley said to-day that while he was in Auburn prison an agent of the Gould family went to him with an offer of $100,000 if he would swear that Katherine Clemmons was his wife. He declared that he would go on the witness stand and give the details of the amazing attempt to bribe him in the effort to prevent the marriage of Howard Gould and the beautiful actress.

Began 10 Years Ago.

The attempt to prove that Katherine Clemmons had a husband living when she married Howard Gould began as far back as ten years ago. It was renewed when Mrs. Gould left her husband because, as she declared in her bill of complaint in her suit against him, "He is an unfit person to live with."

It was to prove this that Detective Sergeant Peabody was sent on his famous trip to Baltimore by former Inspector McLaughlin.

All Family Drawn In.

Practically every member of the family of the late Jay Gould has now been drawn into the scandal. In addition to the George Goulds, it was stated to-day that Miss Helen Gould would be subpoenaed and would testify against Mrs. Howard Gould.

George Gould is understood to have volunteered to testify against Howard's wife. But if his own wife is ready to follow him on the stand to tell a different story it is expected that George Gould will change his mind. Edwin Gould's family's departure for Europe is taken as an indication that he does not wish to be drawn into the family row. One report to-day was that Mme. Anna Gould, divorced wife of Count Boni de Castellane, may come as a witness, as she is understood to have information to help her brother.

Cropping out in all the stories that emanate from sources that must be considered as authoritative, is the news that employes on the yacht Niagara and at the different Gould homes will also be summoned as witnesses. It is said that all of them could, if they desired, tell sensational testimony that might assist materially in the outcome of the divorce proceedings.

Army of Letectives.

No secret has been made of the fact that detectives—many, indeed, and at high salaries—have been employed for months by Howard Gould, who has been anxious to find out just who Katherine Clemmons was before her marriage to the millionaire. It is said that he has not been as successful as he may have wished. But detectives kept on the actress-wife's trail just the same, much to her frequent embarrassment.

To-day, Clarence J. Shearn, Mrs. Howard Gould's attorney, will make a formal demand upon Police Commissioner Bingham to carry the department investigation to a logical conclusion by making it clear whether Howard Gould did or did not pay money to the city Detective Bureau.

Following the announcement that the entire Gould family would be drawn into the divorce proceedings, and that the Goulds were at odds in the scandal that threatens to disrupt the previous harmony that existed between brothers and sisters, comes word to-day from a woman friend who is very close to Mrs. Howard Gould, that if Howard subpoened his brother George to give testimony to the effect that Mrs. Howard Gould drank heavily and lost her temper frequently, Mrs. George Gould would be called to rebutt him. This is the first time that there has been any public indication that the George Goulds might have different opinions on the divorce subject.

Will George Testify?

"I am quite confident that George Gould is never likely to take the stand against Mrs. Howard Gould," declared this woman.

"I happen to know that he would not like to appear to be opposed to his wife in a thing of this sort. However, Mrs. Howard Gould is determined that if George has really consented to testify against her she will ask Mrs. George to tell some interesting facts concerning the family situation.

"Mrs. George is, as a matter of fact, very friendly toward Mrs. Howard. She sympathizes with her deeply in her present trouble, and it will be much to Howard's best interests to keep her out of the case if he can.

"Howard"'s sister-in-law has not a very high opinion of him, and she has heard enough family talk to make her a valuable witness for Mrs. Howard. For instance, Mrs. George would be in a position to tell of everything George has ever done toward trying to prove that Mrs. Howard is not a good woman, and all these efforts have failed.

"Mrs. George Gould's name has been mentioned before, and it is understood in a general way that at different times George employed detectives to pry into Mrs. Howard's affairs. Mrs. George, on direct examination by Mrs. Howard's attorney, could be forced to throw some amusing sidelights on all of this detective business, and she would have to admit that, although some of the cleverest detectives in the country were set on the trail of Katherine Clemmons prior to her marriage to Mr. Gould, they were unable to dig up a single fact that Howard Gould considered as sufficient reason for breaking his engagement. Most of these things George Gould himself would have to admit on cross-examination, but his wife could supplement his statements or supply anything he might forget."

That Whiskers Story.

In some mysterious manner a little more of the defence which Howard Gould will make in the divorce case was allowed to come out yesterday. One story of this character was to the effect that a boatswain on the Niagara, the Gould yacht, had been very displeasing in appearance to Mr. Gould on account of a luxuriant crop of red whiskers. The story is to the effect that Mrs. Gould ordered the man ashore to have his whiskers shaved off, and that he complied, fearing he would lose his berth if he didn't.

In a nutshell, Howard Gould's defence up to the present time is that his wife drank a great deal and that she had a bad temper and used bad words.

Extravagance on the part of Mrs. Howard Gould, carried to a point at which even a son of Jay Gould winced and was compelled to shut off the outward flow of the golden stream, it was learned, would be one of the allegations in Howard Gould's answer to his wife's suit for a separation. The time for serving the answer will end on June 5, but De Lancey Nicoll, attorney for Gould, probably will ask for an extension of twenty days, and as it is the custom among lawyers to grant the first extension, Gould will get the additional time in which to serve his reply to his wife's charges.

Mrs. Gould Extravagant.

"Mrs. Gould seemed to think all the gold mines in the country were working overtime for her," the friend of the millionaire said. "She bought jewels, clothes and other things at a rate that made her husband's head swim. Frequently Gould protested against her extravagance, and his protestations resulted in many bitter quarrels between him and his wife. Mrs. Gould could not be made to realize that there was a limit to her husband's income, and she appeared to pay no atention to his requests that she limit her expenditures.

FEAR ABDUCTED GIRL'S MIND IS GIVING WAY

Erring Policeman Pleads in Vain for His Wife's Forgiveness.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Fourteen-year-old Elizabeth Grady was taken from the Children's Society rooms to the Harlem Police Court to-day to face former Policeman Theodore D. Hess, accused of abducting her.

"Only one thing may prevent Elizabeth from telling the awful cruelties Hess inflicted upon her," said her father, Andrew J. Grady, "and that is the condition of her mind. I fear he has driven her hopelessly insane. The child does not seem to know even me."

Hess was calm when he was led into court and tried his best to assume an unconcerned manner. The infatuation for the Grady girl, which led him to desert his own wife and little daughter, abduct the girl, sacrifice his position and flee to Baltimore, has apparently died. He has not even asked as to the condition of the Grady girl, but he has sent several notes to his wife imploring her to forgive him and come to see him in his cell. Mrs. Hess has ignored all these notes.

In the care of the Children's Society since she was brought back to New York, Miss Grady has said several times that she would tell everything. The most startling part of the girl's confession and denunciation of Hess is expected to be the part dealing with her stay in the home of Hess's mother. The former policeman's mother is now a prisoner in the Tombs, charged with having aided her son in the abduction of the girl. The girl's story may result in another and equally serious charge being placed against the elder Mrs. Hess.

Officers were instructed to-day to remain with the girl's father as long as Hess was in court and to restrain him if he gave any indication of violent intentions. Mrs. Grady, the girl's mother, was so ill to-day that the doctors fear for her life.

STARVING TARS SEE MIRAGE OF FOOD ON OCEAN

Mountain of Sandwiches Appears Before Boston Fishermen Adrift on Banks.

While a mirage of chicken sandwiches and overflowing coffee mugs danced phantom-like on the bow of their little dory, unconsciousness mercifully came to Fred Olsen and Alphonse Landry, fishermen adrift from the Cora S. Nickerson, who were landed here yesterday.

Olsen and Landry were picked up far at sea in an unfrequented part of the ocean by the cable repair ship Mackay-Bennett of Halifax, after three days of starvation, torture from thirst and heart-breaking work to keep their frail boat from filling.

Both men had left T wharf on the Cora S. Nickerson, but while attending their trawls off the banks a fog bank suddenly enveloped them and shut off their view of the Nickerson. An east wind came down with the fog, and this raised a sea that threatened every moment to fill or capsize their dory.

When the fog blew away they could see the Nickerson, hull down, on the horizon. She sailed away without them.

The little boat filled almost as often as they could bail her out, and they dared not take to the oars to row for safety, fearing that if they did they would founder.

The first day found them both exhausted but doing their utmost to keep the dory afloat. The second day they were forced to stop bailing, but were too exhausted to row.

That night visions of Boston restaurants filled the mind of each and in feeble tones they related their experiences in the various eating houses, recounting the bills of fare. The third day they both saw mirages. There were mountains of chicken sandwiches, wedges of pie as big as islands and coffee enough to float the Nickerson.

Then Olsen became unconscious, and Landry soon succumbed to coma.

CRYING "PLOT," FLEEING PASTOR QUITS CHICAGO

Dalrymple of Millbury Dashes from Apartment Just After Defending His Name.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 1.—Five minutes after telling newspaper men that he was being made the victim of a plot to blacken his reputation, and declaring that he would remain in Chicago and issue a signed statement making everything clear, the Rev. Charles R. Dalrymple, former pastor of the First Unitarian Church, Millbury, Mass., left his quarters at No. 294 East Sixtieth street by the back stairs last night, and his present whereabouts is unknown.

Mrs. Clara Woodward and her sister, Miss Louise Manning, who helped the preacher to evade the reporters, expressed satisfaction over his leaving.

Upon his return to the flat at night, after being absent all day, Dalrymple said:

"I made certain statements that were misunderstood by my wife as meaning that I was violating our agreement, and she came forward with this charge involving this girl. It is idle for me to make any unsupported statement when they are on the ground ready to contradict everything. I propose to stay here. I am gaining my health rapidly. If Flora is in Chicago, she has been sent by others who are bent upon ruining me."

TALK CROKER AS LEADER OF IRISH PARTY

Surprising Report of Former Tammany Leaders's Political Plans.

By Publishers' Press.

LONDON, June 1.—Richard Croker may become the leader of the Irish Nationalist party in Parliament. This surprising possibility was pointed out to-day by one who is in close touch with the politics of Ireland.

Croker has failed to get into society, and it is said that he is anxious to get back into political activity. That the old Tammany chieftain intends to affiliate with the Nationalist party is practically certain. There is little doubt that the party will quickly put him forward as a powerful acquisition to their cause.

With Tammany methods it is believed he would have little difficulty in gaining control, and as he is one of the shrewdest politicians New York ever produced, it is thought he would have little difficulty in replacing John Redmond, the present leader in Parliament.

Croker has lived in Ireland long enough to be naturalized. It is pointed out that by persuading some member to resign, it would be possible to put Croker in Parliament within two months. He is popular with the people on account of his love for Ireland.

BOY MAY LOSE EYESIGHT BY BEE ATTACK

NORTH ATTLEBORO, June 1.—Victor Bergeron of West street is threatened to-day with loss of his eyesight on account of being repeatedly stung on the face, neck and hands by a swarm of bees which he attempted to bag in a pillow slip. Bergeron's face and hands are greatly swollen, and he is suffering extreme pain.

The bee swarm was discovered yesterday afternoon in the school yard on School street by several boys. Led by a queen bee, the swarm lighted on a large maple tree.

Bergeron volunteered to climb into the tree and capture the bees. He got a ladder and made his way to the swarm. Suddenly the queen bee alighted on his face, and the entire swarm followed, covering the young man's face and neck.

Screaming with pain, Bergeron lost his hold on the ladder and fell to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet.

Robert Myers, fifteen years old, undaunted by Bergeron's plight, volunteered to capture the swarm, which had returned to the tree limbs. With his face covered by automobile glasses and a heavy cloth, and wearing thick gloves, he climbed the ladder with the pillow case and got the swarm into the receptacle without difficulty.

More than 200 people witnessed the capture.

KNEW PLOT TO KILL PRESIDENT; IS FOUND SLAIN

Man Taken from Furnace Overheard Plan to Assassinate Roosevelt, Says Wife.

CINCINNATI, O., June 1.—That Frank Kess, an educated Hungarian, whose charred body was found to-day in a furnace of the Ryan soap factory, was killed by anarchists because of his knowledge of a plot to assassinate the President, is the police theory. The body was discovered by John McDermott, engineer at the factory, early in the morning. A post mortem examination proved that the man's skull was fractured before the body was placed in the furnace.

The entire detective forced worked on the case all day without discovering any definite clew, until the wife of the murdered man told an almost incredible story of what happened to her husband a few hours before his death.

She said that Wednesday night Kess stumbled upon a number of anarchists in the rear of a saloon at Elm and Findlay streets. There he overheard three men, one of whom said his name was Koenig, and that he came from Paterson, N. J., to plan the assassination of President Roosevelt during his visit to Canton, the day before Decoration Day.

Kess told his wife that after he heard the diabolical plat, his presence was discovered by the anarchists, that he was seized and under threats of death, made to swear not to reveal what he had heard.

Mrs. Kess says she never saw her husband so excited as he was when he returned home that night. He discussed with her whether he ought to tell the police what he had heard.

FRENCH STRIKE PREVENTS MAIL BOAT'S SAILING

PARIS, June 1.—The maritime strike was the principal subject considered at a meeting of the council of ministers to-day. Arrangements were made to continue the postal and passenger service to the Mediterranean colonies by using naval ships. But the big subject of increasing the pensions for invalided seamen, which caused the strike, was not considered.

This leaves the big transatlantic companies powerless to resume their service. Just how badly they have been hurt was shown by the fact that the Provence was unable to sail from Havre to-day although she is a mail steamer. No steps have even been taken to assure the resumption of mail service to the United States. This is causing the greatest concern to business men.

CHILD THOUGHT STOLEN DISCOVERED DROWNED

LITTLE "TOMMY" O'NEILL, MISSING SINCE THURSDAY, LOST LIFE OFF WHARF.

The body of little three-year-old "Tommy" O'Neill, son of John O'Neill of No. 115 Charter street, North End, was found to-day floating in the waters of the harbor off the wharf of the Boston Gas Company. Employes of the company discovered it and quickly took the body ashore. It was identified as that of the O'Neill boy, who had been missing from his home since last Thursday afternoon.

It is believed the child had been playing about the wharf and fell overboard.

The grief of the child's parents when they learned of the finding of his body in the waters of the harbor was pitiful. In spite of the theory of the police that the child had fallen into the harbor, the mother of the boy had held firmly to a premonition that the little one had been kidnapped. A whole neighborhood had been hunting for the boy since Thursday night, when he left home to play with some companions.

The police learned to-day that the boy had been seen with several children playing about the gas company's wharf. It is believed he ran too near the edge and tumbled in. The water is very deep at the point where the body was found.

The drowned boy was a remarkably bright little chap for his years and a universal favorite in the neighborhood. The child left the O'Neill tenement Thursday after bidding his mother good-by, saying he was going out to play with his little chums.

He returned about 2 o'clock, telling his mother that a man had given him some candy. When he did not return home at nightfall, the anxious mother declared that someone must have stolen the boy.

OCTOPUS TO MAKE DIVE NEXT WEEK

Heavy Undertow Prevents Submarine Test Off Boston Light.

The submarine boat Octopus did not make its expected plunge to-day off Boston light. The ocean dive will not be made earlier than Monday or Tuesday next.

This news comes as a big surprise to many people who anticipated watching the submarine test to-day. As a matter of plunge to-day.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter early to-day an official at the Fore River Works, Quincy, made the following statement:

"The Octopus was not made ready for its deep-sea dive to-day. Why such a report got out we do not understand. There has been a heavy undertow off the light for the past three days. No submarine could be tested satisfactorily under such conditions, and the derrick arrangements would permit of no operations that would amount to anything more than a farce.

"Then, again, we have a special report from the United States Weather Bureau today that a pretty stiff northeast wind is blowing off the testing grounds. That, if nothing more, would prevent us from getting the Octopus out for the work we desire.

"This heavy undertow, found three days ago, continues to-day unabated. We do not expect to begin any tests until next week, Monday or Tuesday, at the earliest, and the date may have to be deferred later even than that."

SUBMARINE BOAT COMMISSION SOON TO MAKE REPORT

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Within a few days Secretary of the Navy Metcalf will have in his hands the report of the submarine boat board recommending which type of submarines shall be adopted for the navy, to be constructed with the $3,000,000 appropriated for that purpose by the last session of Congress.

The board has already begun its sessions in this city to discuss the remarkable series of comparative trials of submarines which were held off Newport, R. I., recently. It was generally considered by the officers of the Navy Department that the trials were the most satisfactory ever held.

The Octopus, which is of the same type as those now used by the navy, made demonstrations that broke all records of foreign submarines. Aside from the Octopus there were entered in the contest the Lake and Barger, both of which also behaved splendidly. It is possible that the appropriation will be divided among the different types.

6,000 MINERS RESUME WORK

PITTSBURG, June 1.—The threatened cial strike of the miners of the Pittsburg district has been averted. After a conference lasting over five hours in the offices of President Francis L. Robbins of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, both sides agreed to leave the question of the use of the Pate dumping machine to a committee of three and give them thirty days in which to settle the differences.

About 6,000 miners called out yesterday at seventeen mines by District President Francis Feehan will return to work pending the decision of the arbiters.

Charged with breaking into his own store and robbing his clerk, who slept there, of $50 he had saved from his wages, Barney Clayman, a dealer in furniture and antiques at Quincy, has been arrested.

Two charges of larceny have been preferred against him, as a search of the store by the police revealed over $100 worth of articles that had been taken from the residence of John Carey, in West Quincy, nearly two months ago.

NEW CHARGES BY PLAINTIFFS IN EDDY SUIT

Reply to Brief Says Defendants Seized Person of Mrs. Eddy After Bringing of Suit.

CONCORD, N. H., June 1.—Declaring that "never came there out of a Bedlam a more preposterous proposition" than that of the defendants in the Eddy suit, the plaintiffs to-day replied to the brief of the defendants filed earlier in the week.

After reviewing the position of both sides as stated in the arguments at the hearing before Judge Robert N. Chamberlain, the attorneys for the plaintiffs take up the statement of General Frank S. Streeter in his brief in which he states that "the filing of the bill ipso facto placed Mrs. Eddy's person and property under the protection of the chancellor." This position is admitted by the plaintiffs.

Seizure is Charged.

"On the sixth day of March," the reply says, "with actual notice that the suit had been begun and was pending, Baker et al. seized the person and the property of Mrs. Eddy, both being then, as the trustees say, under the protection of the chancellor," and from such seizure the title of these gentlemen, whatever it is, is derived, and they ask the court that the trust, as above summarized, procured as it was, be held to be conclusively for the benefit of the incompetent.

"A deed obtained from a person in the custody of the court, of property likewise in such custody, which allows an incompetent the unrestrained use of $130,000 per year; which allows the trustees (1) possession of one million dollars without accountability except to the incompetent or liability except for wilful wrong doing, and (2) such pay as they are able to satisfy the incompetent is reasonable; and which allows the defendants—Frye, at any rate, to continue in charge of 'Pleasant View,' intercepting Mrs. Eddy's letters and barring the door against her kin; such is the deed the court is asked to affirm as 'beneficial' to the incompetent, and to do so because it satisfies the conscience of the chancellor.

Not Constructive Notice.

"Never came there out of Bedlam a more preposterous proposition save one, the prayer that—the evil genius of counsel to devise a means by which a legal trial of the question of capacity can be prevented being exhausted in vain—the court sends trustees; which contempt stands flagrant and unpurged; come to their assistance and direct their feet to the sinuous path by which legal trial may be avoided, a burlesque of justice substituted in its stead.

"The only thing Baker et al. say, in extenuation, is that, although they had actual notice of the suit, they had not constructive notice, because they committed their seizure before the subpoena was served. It is well settled that constructive notice is but a substitute for actual notice, and that where there is actual notice, whether there is constructive notice is not material."

HIGHER PAY, POORER WORK, SAYS MELLEN

Head of New Haven System Declares Decreased Efficiency Follows Wage Increase.

NEW HAVEN, June 1.—That the increases in wages granted organized labor by the system are each followed by a decrease in efficiency was the story told by President Charles S. Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, in an address to stockholders who had voted to merge this company with the Consolidated Railway Company yesterday afternoon. He said:

"The only uncertain, unhappy elements with which the management has to contend are the demands of organized labor, which are very tremendous, and which will cost us this coming year in the vicinity of $800,000 for increases in wages, and the unfortunate situation we are in with regard to freight car demurrage, which is doubled by the American Railway Association beginning July 1, which will make another $800,000 increase in our expenses.

"Therefore, I have to look in the face from July 1, 1907, an increase in the expenses of this company of $1,600,000 from these two items alone, and I regret to say, so far as the organized labor is concerned, that I am meeting constantly a decreased efficiency with every increase in wages."

The stockholders voted for the merger, the terms of which provided that the charter powers of both companies are vested in the new corporation and the total stock after the exchange of shares is to be $121,187,100, these figures indicating that the present outstanding stock of the New Haven Company is $91,187,100.

THERE'S a very cheap way in which to spend a joyful vacation. Miss Ina Grace Tabor discovered it, and her personal experiences should prove valuable. In the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN she tells how she and her friends came back from their enjoyable trip with three dollars more than they started with.

COREY HILL IN ARMS AGAINST PEST HOSPITAL

Plan to Establish Branch of Homeopathic Institution Calls Forth Angry Protest.

Indignant at the announcement that the trustees of the Boston Homeopathic Hospital have planned to established a branch of the hospital, to be used exclusively as an institution for contagious diseases, on Corey Hill, Brighton, prominent residents of that neighborhood held a meeting of protest last night.

"We must protect our property!" is their cry.

Some of Brighton's wealthiest inhabitants live in the neighborhood surrounding the section of land bordered by Washington street, Corey road, Summit avenue and Allston street, upon which the trustees propose to erect the branch hospital.

They declare with almost one accord that the contagious hospital will be a menace to the health of the entire district; that by reason of the hospital property values will depreciate twenty-five per cent. and that the vacant land in the vicinity will be made worthless.

Attorneys have been consulted and today a petition, the initial move in the campaign, is being circulated among all the residents about the entire section.

On one side of the hill is the Brookline line, and its proximity to the proposed hospital has made it necessary for the trustees to petition the town of Brookline for permission to build. The Brookline residents and land owners adjoining will fight the erection of the building in their town, while the concentrated efforts of the Brighton residents will be centred upon City Hall and the officials from whom permits must be granted before the work can proceed.

Alexander Chalmers has been selected chairman of the organization, to fight the trustees. John P. Styles is its secretary.

FRITZI SCHEFF AGAIN STRICKEN

NEW YORK, June 1.—Cable advices received here to-day state that Fritzi Scheff, the actress, has suffered another attack of peritonitis, which forced her to close her Western tour suddenly last season. She is now in Paris, and her friends who remember how serious was the last attack are greatly worried over her condition, although it is asserted she is in no danger.

Miss Scheff sailed only a few weeks ago and intended to tour several European countries.

She is expected back in the United States in August.

VANDERBILT'S WIFE LIONIZED FOR HEROISM

Refused to Leave Yacht Run Down by Naval Launch Though it Nearly Sank.

SAILORS CHEERED HER ON

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 1.—Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt looked death in the face unflinchingly when the steam launch of Rear Admiral John P. Merrel, with the Rear Admiral and several other naval officers on board, crashed into the port side of her thirty-foot sloop Caprice, in the outer bay, and cut the yacht down to the water's edge.

Had there been the least sea the yacht must have gone to the bottom inside of two minutes. Mrs. Vanderbilt, who stood in the cockpit beside her sailing master, Captain Nutson, ducked in time to avoid the swinging boom of the little craft, and then stepped on a seat to avoid the water that came on board.

Not for an instant did she lose her presence of mind. She smiled and bowed acknowledgement of the apology of Rear Admiral Merrell for the carelessness of his coxswain and remarked:

Declines All Assistance.

"He was a little careless, wasn't he?"

She declined all offers of assistance when Captain Nutson reported that the yacht was not damaged below the water line. She said smilingly that she would remain on the yacht when the Rear Admiral urged her to permit him to take her ashore.

Finally the steam launch, which was only damaged to the extent of some smashed cabin windows, started for the naval pier, while Mrs. Vanderbilt looked after it, still laughing.

"It was the most ridiculous thing I ever saw," she said to the captain. "Why a child could have steered a boat better than that coxswain. He never changed the course a bit, did he? And we couldn't dodge him, either, thanks to lack of wind. I think, captain, we can make the harbor going free and keep that hole above water, don't you?"

The captain agreed, and as the light wind was directly out to the west, the little Caprice swimmed before it back to her anchorage in the inner harbor off the ship yards.

The captain on the bridge of the German warship Bremen shouted through a megaphone to know if aid was needed, with an offer to launch a boat at once. The Rear Admiral shouted his thanks and a refusal.

Germans and Chilians Cheer Her.

A cheer broke from the tars on the Bremen when the launch finally steamed away without taking Mrs. Vanderbilt, and they cheered again when the yacht, running free, started back toward the harbor. From the Chilian cruiser Zeneto, too, came the sound of a far away cheer, for the incident had been watched through glasses from that vessel.

Mrs. Vanderbilt had wet feet when the Caprice reached her anchorage and she entered the dingy to go ashore. But on landing she laughingly declined the captain's offer to call a carriage and walked up to her house.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was the heroine of Newport to-day when the news of her adventure was told, but she did not appear to think she had done anything especially brave.

GOVERNYR SIGNS SHOE MACHINERY

on Governor Guild and ask him to veto the Shoe Machinery bill if it came to him without the amendment. We feared that without this amendment we would become involved in expensive litigation, provided the Shoe Manufacturers might choose later to enjoin us from using our union stamp on their goods.

"I am surprised that Governor Guild has signed this bill so quickly. He gave us no intimation of how he would act on our petition. His signing the bill without the amendment in it seriously affects our union, since the bill makes a way for the shoe manufacturers to apply for an injunction restraining us from using our label on their goods.

"While I do not believe that the final judgment of a court would be against our union in the agreement we have with the shoe manufacturers to affix our union stamp on all their goods, we felt bound to protest the measure, not caring to become involved in a burden of expense for our defence in whatever litigation might ensue.

Fears Friction.

"Whether any friction will involve us as a result of the passage of this bill remains to be seen. We earnestly hope we may be saved from such trouble, but we can not be sure."

Senator J. H. Vahey said to-day:

"I think that the passage of the Shoe Machinery bill is one of the best pieces of legislative work that has been accomplished in many years. It is important not only because it strikes a deserved blow at a grasping, unreasonable and exacting monopoly, but also because it has served to encourage the people of the Commonwealth in the belief that notwithstanding the tremendous odds and influence opposed to such a measure, there is yet sufficient courage and integrity in the Legislature to enact it into law.

"I am, of course, personally much gratified at the result."

PRESIDENT GOMPERS THANKS GUILD FOR SIGNING SHOE BILL

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor personally congratulated Governor Guild to-day for signing the Shoe Machinery bill. He also thanked the Governor for what he termed the latter's attitude toward labor in general.

Mr. Gompers, accompanied by President Edward Cohen of the State Branch, A. F. of L., and President A. M. Huddell of the Boston Central Labor Union called on the Governor and had a forty-minute chat with him. It was their first visit to His Excellency.

"Our visit was purely social and informal, I can assure you," said President Gompers, to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter afterward.

"Was your visit in connection with the held-up appointment of A. F. Pidgin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics?" Mr. Gompers was asked.

"No, not at all," he replied.

A few minutes later the labor leaders entered Mr. Pidgin's office, however, and were still closeted with him at noon.

ROOSEVELT CAR KIDNAPS A BOY

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 1.—President Roosevelt reached Pittsburg over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at 7:45 a. m. today. When the train pulled into the depot there was a detail of police and detectives on guard in addition to several hundred people who were anxious to catch a glimpse of the President. He appeared anxious for a little fresh air and for ten minutes strolled up and down the platform.

Coming down from Lansing, Mich., at Albion, the President's car unwittingly kidnapped a six-year-old boy who had been placed on the platform during the handshaking and left there. The President took him on his lap, gave him an orange and told him a bear story. When the town of Homer was reached he was left in charge of relatives.

ARLINGTON 100 YEARS OLD; CANNONS BOOM; FLAGS FLY

Great Parade at Observance of Town's Century Jubilee—Hundreds of Natives Join in Celebration.

The celebration of Arlington's centennial is being accomplished to-day with all the anticipated enthusiasm, and thousands thronged the sidewalks to view the long and spectacular procession which started promptly at 10 o'clock. To aid in the fit observance of this greatest of red-letter days in the history of the town, hundreds of natives of Arlington came from far and near to participate in the festivities today. Not a business block in the town is without profuse decorations, and from the windows of people's homes flags are flying and carnival spirit is running high.

Especially beautiful are the decorations of the public buildings, and the Public Library building, the Town Hall and the Soldiers' monument are solid banks of red, white and blue.

Began at Sunrise.

The day's celebratio bega as the sun rose at 4:10 o'clock, when a salute of one hundred guns was fired at Russell Park. The deep boom of cannot lasted more than one hour and served as a summons to every man, woman and child i nthe town to be up and about and to join the fete. Business is entirely suspended, and the warmth of the first June sun is especially grateful to-day in Arlington.

The parade, in four divisions, began forming at 9:30 o'clock and at 10 began the procession, going over the following route:

Park street to Massachusetts avenue, to Winter street, to Broadway, to Warren street, to Medford street, to Massachusetts avenue. The big parade was the principal feature of the celebration. Every patriotic, social, commercial and secret society organization in the town sent out full delegations. Two companies of militia and the several veteran and patriotic organizations comprised the first division, which was in charge of Chief Marshal Waren W. Rawson and staff.

In the second division, William A. Muller, marshal, marched the centennial committee, city officials, veteran firemen, the city fire department with its full equipment, invited guests in carriages and the school children in gaily decorated floats and barges.

Business Men in Third Division.

Commercial and business interests of the town were represented in the third division, which was in charge of Marshal Walter K. Hutchinson and staff and the fourth division included market gardeners and others not in sufficient numbers to to classified.

Several bands and drum corps furnished inspiring march music and the parade was much longer and more complete than was believed possible. All along the route of march, thousands in the holiday crowds cheered the paraders and several beautiful floats, illustrating the gradual progression of the century, the growth of Arlington and life in the old days, when Arlington had a handful of men and women for a populace. At 1 o'clock a banquet is served at which Governor Guild is the principal guest. Later in the afternoon athletic and sports will be the principal feature with valuable prizes and loving cups to be awarded to the winning contestants. The events will be held on Lawrence field, Medford street.

The program will end with a grand display of fireworks on Russell park during the evening.

BEST POLICE AND MAILMEN, SAYS HIBBARD

Boston has the best police officers and most efficient letter carriers in this broad land, according to Postmaster Hibbard, who praised the boys in blue and gray in a speech last evening at the Boston Social Club, an organization composed of policemen, at their rooms at No. 126 Dartmouth street.

"Without being biased in any way, I cannot help but think that the policemen and carriers of Boston are in every way superior to those of other cities," said Mr. Hibbard.

During the progress of the meeting news of several promotions in the department were received. Sergeant George M. Carr of division 1, North End, is advanced to the grade of lieutenant, and Sergeant Henry J. Watkins of division 6, South Boston, receives a similar promotion. Patrolman James McDevitte of division 1, North End, is promoted to be sergeant and goes to division 3, West End, and Patrolman Charles T. Reardon of division 4, Lagrange street, is promoted to be sergeant and is transferred to division 16, Back Bay. Three reserve officers are made regular members of the department. They are Perley G. Tilton, Patrick McGuicklan and John E. McCarthy.

ONLY TWO MORE TO QUALIFY ON HAYWOOD JURY

Boise, Idaho, June 1.—There was a distinct change in the attitude of all parties concerned when court was resumed in the trial of Haywood for the Steuenburg murder to-day. Attorneys for both sides, the stern-featured judge and even the defendant all appeared brighter than usual, as it was plain that unless an unforeseen catastrophe occurred the jury must be completed before night and the decks cleared for the real action in this legal conflict.

There were but two men remaining to qualify, one to fill the seat of Tourtelotte, who disqualified himself, and one to fill the seat of a man to be removed by the last peremptory challenge of the defence.

As senior counsel for the prosecution Hawley remarked:

"Loafing is at an end and we will begin real business next week."

When court reconvened Senator Borah took up the examination of Hoff, the local banker, who was drawn just prior to adjournment last night.

HONEYMOON MOTOR TOUR FOR EDNA MAY

"Belle of Mayfair," to Wed Oscar Lewisohn Tuesday, Has Elaborate Trousseau.

LONDON, June 1.—Edna May, who has so convincingly proved her claim to the title of "the Belle of Mayfair" on the stage and off, by right of might and an unimpeachable profile, is engrossed with the plans for her marriage next Tuesday to Oscar Lewisohn.

Though Miss May is renouncing the footlights and retiring to family life—by way of the registrar's office—her trousseau is ample evidence that the vanities of the world still have their attraction. One of the items is $750 worth of shoes. Other things are in keeping.

The wedding is to take place at Ascot, where the actress lives. There will be about thirty guests.

"It will be just a family gathering," said Miss May, with a charming smile. "When one begins to ask relatives and connections that number is soon reached. We want, of course, to have the quietest wedding possible. We both feel that way about it.

"Where will we go? We will spend three months in our motor car, visiting the places I want to see and to know well. We will dawdle about Venice and the Italian lake section, and then tour the old cities of Spain, pleasures that I am sure will compensate us. When we return we will settle down near London again till the late Autumn.

"Then? Oh, then"—dreamily—"we will go away. First we shall visit America and Mr. Lewisohn's people. Afterward we intend to go to Australia, and from ther to take a peep at Japan and many places in the Far East.

"When we finally come back to England we will have our own home near London, and that"—Miss May looked as demure as the Salvation Army lassie—"will be for good."

WILMINGTON, Del., June 1.—The meeting of the stockholders of the American Pneumatic Company, a $20,000,000 corporation of the State of Delaware, with headquarters in Boston, adjourned shortly before midnight without having elected a temporary chairman.

It is claimed by the supporters of W. E. L. Dillaway of Boston, who is president of the company, that the counting of the vote will show a big majority for their candidate, but this Ames of Boston and others refuse to admit.

Recently a movement was started with the purpose of ousting President Dillaway.

The Dillaway forces claim a victory in securing only latest dated proxies for votes.

ADMIRAL COGHLAN OUT OF NAVY TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan, the captain who gave the order to fire the first shot at the battle of Manila Bay, and who gained notoriety because the German Government took offence at statements he made about the German "nagging" during the war, retires from the navy to-morrow. He is past the age limit, having reached his sixty-second birthday last December.

FORGOTTEN STATUTE HITS LUNCH CARTS

NASHUA, N. H., June 1.—Alderman Moran last evening called attention to a forgotten statute which will, if enforced, put an end to the lunch wagon business in New Hampshire. HUNT YOUTH'S BODY IN RIVER AND FOREST

Searching Parties Seeking Trace of J. B. Clark, Missing a Week from Dover, N. H.

DOVER, N. H., June 1.—Several searching parties to-day scoured the woods and dragged the river around this city for Jay B. Clark, a sixteen-year-old boy, who has been missing for a week.

Young Clark has been very despondent because a young woman friend transferred her affections to another, and it is feared that he has committed suicide.

Another theory advanced is that in a period of mental depression he is wandering in the forest and in danger of starving. Clark has been known to have lapses of this kind, at which times he has gone away from home.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Clark, of No. 48 New York street and was employed at the Cocheco print works. On his way home to dinner last Saturday noon he stopped at the mill gate, where his father is employed as a watchman, showed him his envelope containing his week's wages, and then, saying that he was going to dinner, passed up Central avenue.

This was the last time he was seen. It had been the boy's invariable custom to go home on pay-day and hand his mother his envelope before opening it. She is nearly distracted with grief. Patiently and hopefully but in vain she has waited what has seemed one of the longest weeks of her life expecting some tidings of her missing son. The police have been notified and given a photograph of the boy.

Clark is about five feet seven inches in height, of light complexion and wore a dark plaid suit and corduroy cap.

GIRL LURED BY CLUBMAN, LIKE EVELYN, SAYS THAW

Says Drugged Wine Was Given Beautiful Visitor by Ex-Army Officer in Gilded Gotham Suite.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Through the instance of Harry K. Thaw, there became known to-day the story of an attack, in a luxurious Fifth avenue batchelor apartment, upon a beautiful Pittsburg woman, which parallels the terrible experience of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in the studio of Stanford White.

Thaw learned of the case from Roger O'Mara, the famous Pittsburg detective whom he retained after killing White. The case had terminated in the settlement out of court of a suit for damages against Captain William H. Wheeler, a wealthy retired officer of No. 66 Fifty-first street.

Nothwithstanding this, Thaw insisted that the details of the case be given to the Evening Journal for publication. He declared that the exposure of men of the Stanford White class would do more good than civil suits. In the interests of the young woman in this case, Thaw said the whole affair should be made public.

Wine Makes Her Drowsy.

The plaintiff in the suit and victim of the attack which caused the suit, is Mrs. Bland S. Campbell. She is an exceptionally attractive woman, twenty years old and wife of Kennedy C. Campbell of Pittsburg. Her mother is Mrs. Roberta J. Gardner, who held a high social position in Pittsburg until financial reverses made it necessary for her to come to New York and enter business.

Captain Wheeler who is charged with having lured young Mrs. Campbell to his luxuriously furnished apartments, where he persuaded her to drink wine, which made her drowsy and then made an attack which she repelled only after the most desperate fighting, is a well-known club and society man.

Suit was brought anr pressed for $25,000 damages, after efforts to have the District Attorney's office bring criminal proceedings against Wheeler had failed. The summons and complaint, in which Mrs. Campbell recited in detail her terrible experience, were served upon Wheeler in person and through his lawyer he filed in answer a general denial. Subsequently his attorney effected a compromise of the case.

Lawyer Wecih took Detective O'Mara, Mrs. Campbell and her mother to the District Attorney's office, and Mr. Jerome sent them to Assistant District Attorney Smyth. The latter found that, according to all legal precedent, there was no ground for criminal action. This was due to the fact that Mrs. Campbell had not immediately sought the arrest of her assailant, and that a civil suit had intervened, the civil action having then been begun.

Wheeler's lawyer, H. J. Black, finally offered a compromise of $2,100. Inasmuch as there was no chance to punish Wheeler Criminally, Mr. Kennedy Campbell, who had been told of the affair, thought it better to accept the settlement and avoid notoriety.

Roger O'Mara, when seen to-day at the Hotel Imperial, expressed indignation at the failure of the District Attorney to take criminal action.

Blames District Attorney.

"It seems to me that there should be some redress in a case of this kind beyond a paltry civil action," he said. "If this young woman has been misled as to the proper method of procedure, that ought not to be a cloak for inactivity on the part of the District Attorney's office."

Mr. O'Mara was acquainted with the family of Mrs. Campbell in Pittsburg and knew her grandfather, Colonel Brockenborough, a distinguished soldier in the Confederate army during the civil war.

Lawyer Welch, when seen at his office to-day, said that for professional reasons he could not discuss the case. Dr. Cooke admitted that Mrs. Campbell had been his client, but declined to discuss the case.

BERWIN'S COUP SURPRISES FITZ

Acting Chairman of the Board of Aldermen William Berwin has stolen a march on the Mayor by having his picture inserted in the 1907 Municipal Register, which will appear next month. Mayor Fitzgerald was much surprised. It is customary to run a cut of the chairman of the board in the Register, but Alderman Berwin considers it a master stroke to get one of an acting chairman in.

The Mayor was not displeased, however, as he and Berwin are very good friends, and the latter would like to run for Mayor on the Republican ticket if Mayor Fitzgerald would not be offended.

DIES BENEATH TONS OF CLAY

MAN SHOT IN ROW DIES AT HOSPITAL

Casta Laperio, an Italian who was shot in a row with some of his countrymen on Fleet street last Sunday, died to-day at the Relief Hospital. According to the hospital authorities, Laperio was suffering from "fractured nose and pneumonia." It has not been determined that the man succumbed to injuries received in the fight. His assailant is at liberty on $600 bonds.

World's Champion Woman Diver Tells How to Master the Art of Swimming

ANNETTE KELLERMAN, WORLD'S CHAMPION WOMAN SWIMMER AND DIVER.

"Anyone Can Learn," Declares Fair Annette Kellerman, Who Astonishes Experts by Feats of Daring.

MISS ANNETTE KELLERMAN, champion woman swimmer of the world, whose feats in the water have brought her fame that is world-wide, to-day tells the BOSTON AMERICAN readers how to learn to swim in three lessons. Miss Kellerman, who is Australian born, is soon to visit Boston on her tour round the world. She is at present in this country, where her aquatic exhibitions have astonished all who witnessed them.

Miss Kellerman has defeated many noted swimmers. While she has won some long-distance contests, her specialty is fancy diving. Miss Kellerman will spend a few weeks in New York and Boston, after which she is going to Chicago, where she has a contract to swim at the "White City."

She is a young woman of perfect physique. She says outdoor exercise is responsible for her health and strength. The following is her advice to persons who wish to learn to swim. Cut this out. Warm weather will soon be here, and if you don't know how to swim you will want this article:

By Annette Kellerman.

I will tell from my experience the easiest methods of learning how to swim, dive and float, the different kinds of strokes and how to train for racing.

Of all exercises intended to develop the body, to give it suppleness and symmetry, to tone up the whole system, swimming is unequalled.

Above all, no one can tell what day life itself may depend upon our knowing or not knowing how to swim—one's own life or the life of one dear to us.

For all these reasons, it is difficult for me to understand why an art so easily acquired is not possessed by all, women as well as men, girls and boys alike.

Had I my way I would make it compulsory on every girl and boy who attends school to learn to swim.

Even when it is necessary to resort to the tank for our swim, it is an exercise that is unsurpassed in its developing, health-giving results, but of course those results are most fully secured by a plunge in the open air, with the sun bath following. No medicine physicians can prescribe equals that in toning up the nerves and invigorating the whole system.

And to learn to swim is so simple! It can be mastered in three lessons.

"If You Can Walk You Can Swim."

I have never yet found a girl or boy who could walk who could not learn to swim.

When I have once taught my pupil that she can keep her body afloat in the water, I count my work more than half done. After that it is a mere question of practice, of adding step by step to the lesson gained, until, almost unconsciously, she has become an expert swimmer and has acquired an art that will give continued pleasure throughout her life.

There are some who learn to swim in deep water, but I advise my readers to begin in water that is not over the learner's shoulders.

This first stroke is the breast stroke. The arms are extended in front of the body, with the palms joining. At the word "One" they are spread wide apart, as far as they will go, with the palms turning backward. At the word "Two" hands are brought together again beneath the breast, and at the word "Three" they are agian extended in front of the body as they were at first, and the stroke is repeated.

While this movement of the hands and arms is made there is a simultaneous and similar movement of the legs. They are extended together, as are the arms in front. At the word "One" they make the same movement as the arms; at the word "Two" they are drawn up, with bending knees, and at the word "Three" they are again extended with a strong backward kick, the feet coming together again as they were before the stroke was begun.

Correct Breathing Important.

And at this point I teach my pupils how to breathe. Now, in swimming nothing can be of greater importance than correct breathing. Nothing else so clearly marks the difference between the strong, regular swimmer who can keep up stroke after stroke, without tiring and almost indefinitely, and the feeble swimmer who soon becomes "winded" and whose stroke quickly becomes jerky and feeble, as does the way in which he breathes.

The second stroke you should learn after you have mastered the breast stroke, and can swim about freely, is the underhand side stroke. Usually the swimmer lies on the right side, but either side that comes most natural will be the best.

If the swimmer lies on the left side, the right arm is extended forward just under the surface of the water, while the left arm is stretched backward beside the body. The legs are extended backward, with the heel of the right foot against the instep of the left.

The stroke is begun by drawing the right hand backward and downward until the hand is directly below the right side. Simultaneously the left hand is thrust forward beneath the surface of the water until it is in front of the swimmer's face, while the legs are drawn toward the body, but stretched apart, the right knee a little nearer to the surface of the water than is the left.

With the second movement the right hand is brought forward extending full length in front of the swimmer, while the left sweeps backward beneath the surface. Simultaneously the legs are kicked backward and brought together again to their original position.

Overhand Stroke Fastest.

In swimming long distances, this side stroke is found much easier than the breast stroke, as the body lies more comfortably in the water, the breathing is done with less difficulty, and there is less resistance of chest and body.

The overhand side stroke is a faster stroke than the breast or the underhand strokes, and, together with the overhand breast stroke, is generally used by contestants in swimming races.

At the beginning of the overhand side stroke the body lies on either side, the arms in the same position as at the beginning of the underhand side stroke. The lower arm is swept downward toward the thigh, the palm of the hand turned down, with closed fingers. Then the hand is quickly turned palm upward so that it cuts the water sidewise as it is raised above the surface, and the arm is thrust forward, the palm again turning down as the hand reaches its position in front of the head.

At this moment the upper arm stroke is started. Beginning about six inches in front of the face, with palm turned down, the arm, slightly bent as it enters the water, is swept backward close to the body. When the upper arm is about opposite the shoulder as it cleaves the water, the legs should open for the leg stroke, the kick should be made when the hand leaves the water, and it should be completed and the legs extended straight backward before the left hand leaves the water to take its position for the next stroke.

ASHMAN FINDS $419 HIDDEN IN RUBBISH

PORTLAND, Me., June 1.—While J. P. Anderson, an ashman, was removing rubbish from the yard of an untenanted store in the "Tenderloin," he found a bag which contained $419 in bills. It is supposed that the money was stolen from a lumberman in a drunken stupor, and that the thief, interrupted, hid it in the ash pile before his arrest.

FRISCO GRAFT CHIEFS BEFORE BAR OF JUSTICE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—When Judge Lawler called court for the arraignment of the Gas Company directors, the indicted officials of the united railroads, and Ruef and Schmitz, the prosecution appeard with a stack og Grand Jury testimony as tall as a man.

Counsel for the defendants had demanded that each defendant be furnished with a copy of the testimony taken before the Grand Jury in which indictment was returned. As each of the defendants was indicted fourteen times, this meant 120 copies of the bulky testimony.

The prosecution intends to arraign them all to-day, if it is possible to have the testimony on their indictments ready for them. In case they are all ararigned the reading of the indictments may go far into the night. A conservative estimate on the time that will be consumed is ten hours.

Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz has decided to make an affidavit which he will file with Judge Dunne on Monday in which he will set forth his objections to the alleged undue influences which, he claims, are being exerted by the prosecution in the trial of his case. His affidavit will be a protest against the prosecution and the court.

Schmit zarose in court and started to make a statement. He was ordered to take his seat and the judge stated that he would hear from him through counsel.

When asked what statement he intended to make, Mayor Schmitz said:

"I have studiously avoided giving statements to the press from the outset of this trial as I did not want to try my case in the newspapers as the prosecution is doing. But it now seems that the prosecution through the press is striving to influence jurors and to intimidate them and I feel that it is time that I should protest, and I mean to do so."

Detective Burns told how he persuaded Abe Ruef to plead guilty recently to the charge of extortion.

"When this graft investigation started," said Burns, "the corporation bribe-givers planned to shift the entire blame on Abraham Ruef. I pointed this out to Ruef before he pleaded guilty to the charge of extortion, and asked him to test the truth of my assertions.

"One prominent citizen came to me after the indictment of Ruef and stated that it would be a good thing to send Ruef to the penitentiary. It was his opinion that the entire purpose of the prosecution would be served with the conviction of Ruef. That citizen has since been indicted for bribery."

ARRESTS NEAR IN NEW YORK'S TRUNK MYSTERY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Two detectives were hurried to Philadelphia last evening by Captain McCafferty of the detective bureau, to run down a clue to the slayers of Father Caspar Vartarian, whose body was discovered last Sunday in a trunk, at No. 333 West Thirty-seventh street. It was learned that two Armenians who yesterday were put through the "third degree" at police headquarters, furnished Captain McCafferty with important information.

"If my men arrive in Philadelphia in time, I believe the murder or murderers of Father Vartarian will be arrested in a few hours," said Captain McCafferty. "I don't believe that the persons who killed the priest have fled for Armenia or elsewhere abroad. I am of the opinion that they are hiding not far from this city."

It became known last evening that Police Commissioner Bingham has ordered Captain McCafferty to place every available man on the case. Mrs. Scherer, in whose home the two mysterious Armenians left the trunk containing the body, is making arrangements to move.

'DUDLEY STREET TERMINAL IS A PERIL TO LIFE'

B. A. ATKINSON.

Roxbury Merchants Unite in Demanding More Exits and Entrances.

DEFECT EASILY REMEDIED

"Gives us more entrances and exits to the Dudley street elevated terminal!"

This cry has gone up from Roxbury business men and their thousands of patrons, who are thoroughly wrought up over the failure of the Boston Elevated to furnish more than one place to enter and leave the terminal. At present there is only one way of entering the terminal, and that is at a turnstile on Zeigler street. The only outlet is on private land leading to Dudley street. Patrons are in danger of their lives at all times, for after entering they must cross two sets of tracks before reaching the stairway leading to the trains. In the busy hours cars pass the point where people enter on an average of at least once a minute.

The Most Dangerous Station.

"It's high time conditions at the terminal were remedied," said B. A. Atkinson of the "Blue Store" to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "If an architect should be hired to plan the most dangerous station in his power, he could not have improved on the station now there. Every person who enters the terminal through the Zeigler street turnstile is in imminent danger of his life, for he must pass two sets of tracks when he gets inside in order to go upstairs. There is no flagman or watchman at this point to warn people of their danger. The other side of the lower level is equally as dangerous for the boot-blacking parlor on the Warren street side hides the inward bound cars from view until they are a car length from where they stop.

"There is only one outlet from the terminal unless people wish to leave on private ground and take the chance of being arrested or killed in crossing tracks. The only legal exit is from the upper level, and it leads through private land into Dudley street.

Could Be Easily Remedied.

"Many of our new customers have complained about being shunted into Dudley street, 400 or 500 yards from the shopping district.

"There should be at least two more entrances and exits to the terminal, one leading to Washington street and the other to Warren street. This could be done with but little cost. Stairways could be built from where the upstairs waiting rooms are located to the vacant land at the northern side of the terminal property. There would be no crossing of tracks and endangering life as under present conditions, and shoppers could descend into the middle of the shopping district without walking all around the terminal property to reach it. It is a much-needed reform and it's time the Elevated made this improvement. A business of nearly $4,000,000 a year is done by the merchants in the vicinity of the terminal. Their interests and those of their customers, who come from all sections of Boston, should be considered."

REMARKABLE DANCE BY MISS THOMPSON

Song and dance artists, warblers and wire walkers all had to take a back seat at the Columbia amateur night while Miss Mary Thompson, one of the most graceful young women seen on the local stage this year, walked away with one of the prizes. Miss Thompson did some remarkable acrobatic dancing, in which stepping and contortions were harmoniously blended, and she did not waste any time in going through her act. There were other pretty girls on the bill, any of whom would be a decided acquisition to a beauty show. Miss Florence Parker excelled in dancing, while Miss Gertrude Walsh was the singing favorite. The Foley brothers were also among the winners. The amateur events will be resumed when the Columbia opens in August.

MINISTERS SEEK TO END STRIKE OF TEAMSTERS

Employers Refuse to Attend Meeting After Pleading for Church Aid.

So widespread is the interest in issue involved in the teamsters' strike in this city that for the first time in the history of the country a meeting of ministers is to be held to decide which side they may conscientiously indorse. Next Monday morning, at a meeting of 100 or more Congregational clergymen at the Congregational House on Beacon street, the strike will be thoroughly discussed.

The meeting was arranged by the executive board of the Congregational Ministers' Society. Invitations were extended to the Employers' Association and to the Team Drivers' Union to send representatives to present their side of the case.

Tobin to Appear for Union.

Business Agent Daniel J. Tobin was delegated by the Team Drivers' Union to appear for the union. The Employers' Association wrote Rev. Charles E. Beals of Cambridge, chairman of the committee of arrangements, declining to take part in the discussion. "No good can be done by it," was the terse answer of the Employers' Association.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Employers' Association, at the beginning of the teamsters' strike, sent letters to every minister in the State in the hope of enlisting their aid in the war it was waging on the Teamsters' Union.

George F. Stebbins, secretary of the Master Teamsters' Association had this to say:

"I have heard nothing from any ministers' association regarding any proposed debate on the merits of the teamsters' strike. In case any invitation should be extended to the association it would require a meeting, and what action the members of the association would take at the meeting I cannot say.

Another speaker at the ministers' meeting will be W. B. Eastman of Harvard College, who will present a plan for permanent peace.

The executive board of the Boston Central Labor Union has retained George Fred Williams as counsel for the defence in the fight that President George B. Hugo of the Employers' Association is making against organized labor in the injunction case brought by George B. Hugo & Co. Hugo asks that the defendants, President Arthur M. Huddell of the Central Labor Union and other labor leaders, be restrained from further interference with his business, to boycott or otherwise.

The developments of the case which will be heard on Monday in the Superior Court are being awaited with keen interest on both sides, as it is expected that some important questions affecting the whole problem of the relations of capital and labor will be uncovered in the suit. Frederick W. Mansfield is associated with Mr. Williams in the defence.

On Monday the hearing of testimony before Master James D. Colt will be resumed in the petition of the master teamsters to make the temporary injunction against the striking teamsters permanent.

Benefit Monday Night.

The sale of tickets has been enormous for the benefit entertainment to be given Monday night at the Columbia Theatre. Every box has been taken. Hundreds of people who do not intend to go to the concert have bought tickets to show their sympathy for the strikers. The use of the theatre has been donated, and every theatre in town will be represented in the performance, which is to be entirely voluntary.

RABBI REBUKES MINISTER FOR SLUR ON JEWS

"There has always been freedom of the platform at these conventions; there always should be for the expression of opinions on religious affairs of current life," declared Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of the Free Synagogue of New York, wha was in no way abashed when Rev. Edward C. Towne moved to have him excluded from the platform of the hall during the Free Religious Association convention there yesterday.

"Besides," continued the Rabbi, rebuking the clergymen for the criticism," isn't this association one established for free religious views—for untrammelled expression of opinion on matters divine?" The majority of members appeared to approve of the Rabbi's claim, and his address was delivered and listened to with marked attention.

Liberality of Thought.

In his address, Rabbi Wise, in excellent good temper, made a complete refutation of all insinuations that the leader of a Hebrew congregation could not be as liberal in thought and as broad in expression and action as any member of the association.

"You cannot bring me too good a word, too dazzling a hope nor too penetrating an insight from the Jews," and added: "I join in all that the association stands for —freedom in religion, fellowship in spirit and morality in all the relations of life."

"Christ of the Andes."

Senorita Carolina H. Huidoiro told the story of "The Christ of the Andes," on the summit 14,000 feet high on the boundry between Chile and Argentina, and of the influence for peaceful settlement of disputes between South American republics since the erection of this famous statue three years ago.

The idea of this statute was conceived in the mind of a priestC in Chile at a church service in 1901, during the inspiration born of his own description of the life, teachings and sacrifice of Christ.

Among other speakers were, Julia Ward Howe and Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale.

The Womanly Girl Is the Girl That Men Admire Most

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I would like to see an article in your paper about the tendency of the girls to act in a masculine way. They seem to think that we young men like them more when they act as we do. They are greatly mistaken. If they wish to act as we do, we would rather not have their society. Of course, there are some who encourage this. However, they are not the respectable young men with good intentions. They get their fun out of it, and then make fun of the girls when by themselves. Those who are nice and upright become disgusted with such girls.
A DISAPPOINTED YOUNG MAN.

THERE, girls, is something for you to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest." This young man voices the opinion of most of his kind, I fancy.

The masculine or "sporty" type of girl never has appealed and never will appeal to men. They will flirt with her and go about and have a good time, but they won't marry her.

By all the laws of nature the womanly girl is the girl that men most love and honor.

Loses Respect

THE girl who smokes, talks slang, tells and listens to doubtful stories and behaves in a generally bold way cannot expect to command the same respect from men as does the modest, refined girl.

The man who encourages a girl to drink or to stay out late is not the kind of man whose attentions are an honor to any girl.

The right kind of man admires purity above all qualities in a woman. The girl he loves must be pure-minded, modest, good.

A risque story from the lips of a young girl is like an ugly blight on a flower. When a girl drinks a cocktail or any intoxicant her finer sensibilities are blunted, and she is apt to do or say things that in her more sober moments would shock her inexpressibly.

Is Not Pleasant

IT is not a pleasant thought that men may lead a girl on to do or say foolish things and then turn and wink at each other, is it?

It does not show the men up in a very fine light, but if a girl does not respect herself I suppose the men argue to themselves that she cannot expect them to respect her.

The girl who is modest and well behaved rarely has to complain of lack of courtesy and respect from men.

Men do not want a girl to be loud and bold, but if she is they are sure to take her at her own valuation.

Be womanly; don't ape mannishness in any way. Men find all that sort of thing among themselves. What they seek in girls is gentleness, sweetness, womanliness.

Don't try to be "sporty" if you want men to like you. Be content to be merely girlish and good and sweet, and you will never find cause to complain of the average man's attitude toward you.

For Window Boxes and Flower Gardens

DWARF nasturtiums used as an edging breaks up the straight line of a walk or gravel.

Sweet peas are best grown on fishnet or tennis net draped between stakes. Arranged in this manner they show off to good advantage.

The touch of vivid yellow that is often longed for in the flower garden may be secured in the California poppy. It has beautiful feathery leaves and long, weird-looking seed pods.

Tuberous rooted begonias are easily grown. They thrive in sun or shade, the leaves are attractive, and they blow steadily and profusely until frost, both double and single. The latter is frequently four inches across; in color, white, pink, red, yellow and orange. In Winter they rest in the house contentedly in any out of the way place, and start to grow in the Spring without any coaxing.

The California poppies are excellent to plant next to a border of English violets.

The Shirley poppies can be planted to advantage between the rows of asters. When the poppies are pulled up the asters will branch out and fill up the space.

A climbing nasturtium placed near a bed of bachelor buttons will cover the spot when the plants are cut down the latter part of July, and will give ample room for the self-sown seedlings to get the start for next Summer.

* * *

To start rose cuttings have the cutting from six to ten inches long taken from a branch not too young or too old. The end should be cut slanting, then inserted slanting into soil containing a good deal of sand. The soil should be kept moist all Summer, and by Fall the cutting is well rooted. If started late, say in August, it is necessary to turn a glass jar over the cuttings and draw the soil up around it until only the bottom of the glass is visible. In the Spring they will be nicely started and ready for growth.

* * *

Grow forget-me-nots and mignonette in moist ground. Dwarf asters and verbenas ar also good to use in a moist corner of the flower garden.

PINEAPPLE TAPIOCASPONGE

PUT one can of grated pineapple in a double boiler, add two-thirds cup boiling water, and bring to the boiling point; stir in half a cup of minute tapioca, cover and cook until transparent, stirring frequently. After taking from the stove add the juice of one lemon, sweeten to taste, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Turn into a glass dish and serve cold with whipped or plain cream. This is delicious.

FRENCH COOK'S STEW

WASH and cut the kidney into small pieces and put into a stewpan with an onion cut fine, then add enough water to cover the kidney. Let it boil slowly until tender. When cooked put a large piece of butter in a frying pan; when melted stir in flour until thick and let it brown. Then pour your kidney into the pan and let it simmer for a few minutes, stirring all the time. The secret of a good stew is not to use too much water, as there is not much strength in a kidney.

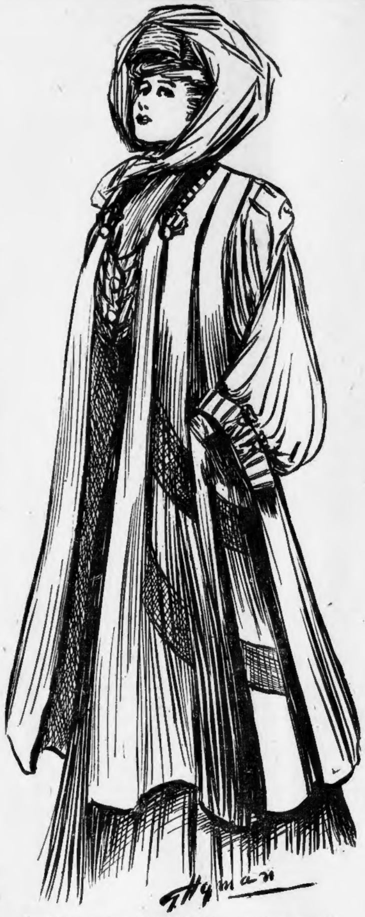
SENSIBLE COAT FOR MOTOR OR DRIVING



A GOOD COAT FOR SUMMER OF RAJAH SILK

BY GRACE HYMAN

RAJAH SILK in its heaviest quality is a favorite material for automobile coats. This coat is cut on circular lines with inverted box pleats. It has the new vest fastening, which is quite the latest thing on coats of all descriptions.

The cuffs, collar and vest are made of striped green and white rajah silk and fastened with large gold buttons.

The little flat collar is of bright green velvet.

Stitched flat to the silk and slipped underneath the pleats are two rows of white silk braid.

The Mending Basket And How to Use It

AN upholsterer's needle will prove very useful to keep in the sewing table drawer. Chair buttons, couch buttons, etc., can be easily replaced by the housekeeper. Even mattresses can be fixed after a little experience.

When the hemstitching is beginning to wear on a good-sized doily or napkin and the linen centre remains good and strong, cut the doily all around the hemstitching, and make a new hem, drawing the threads just far enough away from the old line to find a strong place.

This will give you a smaller doily, practically new. If you do not want to spend the time or take the trouble to hemstitch make a tiny hem and edge it with a narrow lace heavy enough to match your linens.

To mend linen one should use a crewel or fine darning needle and the ravelings of a piece of fine linen for thread. Cover the worn place with a bit of tulle and darn through the meshes of this, drawing the thread firmly, but not too tightly.

In the case of old tablecloths which are past use in the capacity of which they were originally intended, one may make sideboard covers and lunch cloths by utilizing the least worn places. Cut the strip in the desired shape and buttonhole the edge in a simple scallop pattern. When the pattern of the cloth permits the buttonholing may follow the pattern on two sides, the other edges being finished with heavy linen lace.

* * *

For darning stockings some people prefer a ball over which they may darn. This is all right for the feet, but must never be used for the legs, as it would stretch them so noticeably that they could not be worn.

* * *

Holes in table linen should be darned neatly with linen floss or white ravelings of the linen itself. This pieces should be run back and forth as soon as noticed. Holes that are too large to darn may be patched with a piece of the goods. Iron out the edges of the rent, baste the patch smoothly in place, and be sure that it exactly matches in weave and pattern.

If possible, draw threads out around the damaged place and also around the patch, that it may be perfectly even. Then darn it carefully with small stitches, using the linen floss and a long, fine needle.

* * *

The patch should extend at least an inch past the hole on every side and be darned down as carefully as the rent itself. If properly done this will be quite invisible.

* * *

All darns should be pressed when finished. To do this lay the right side down on an ironing board and on the wrong side lay a damp cloth and press with a hot iron until perfectly dry.

THE NEWEST BELTS FOR WOMEN

WOMEN'S belts of elastic and leather and silk grow more alluring each season. The elastic belt always has been a prime favorite with the woman who makes a point of looking trim and chic, for it shapes itself so attractively to the curves of the figure.

Elastic belts come in black, white and plaids. Those made of the black usually are studded with steel and fastened with large steel buckles, but jet is used on the newer and more expensive ones.

One of the most attractive belts shown is made of perfectly plain elastic, with a large oval buckle of dull chased silver. Plaid belts come in pretty greens, reds, blues and browns, and go nicely with the fashionable plaid suitings worn this Spring. The white elastic is studded with steel, and is fastened with a steel or silver buckle.

STRANGE ANIMALS I HAVE MET

Dorothy Dix Tells of Some Weird and Almost Extinct Species Seldom Met With Nowadays

Once Common, but Now a Decided Rarity

Easily Recognized From Tales of Our Fathers

BY DOROTHY DIX

"ONCE," said the 'Old Traveler,' "when I was hunting big game in the Nowhere Mountains, I came across what is without doubt the strangest and rarest animal in the world.

"It was about the size, and greatly resembled in features and shape, an ordinary woman, and was extremely pretty to look at and graceful in its movements. It had long, fine hair, with a pink and white face, and soft expressive eyes, and beautiful white teeth. For some minutes before we came suddenly upon this strange creature, I had heard a low, soft, crooning sort of sound that was musical and pleasant, and following this song—if it can so be called—my native guide and I had crept slowly through the underbrush until an opening in the thicket gave us a full view of the animal. It, or rather she, for it was a female, was sitting in front of her nest, a rude sort of cabin, weaving together strips of material for her offspring, and as she worked she made the pleasant noise of which I have spoken.

"What is it?" I asked my guide.

"It is called the Contented Woman," he replied in a whisper.

"Is it common in these parts?" I inquired.

"Almost Extinct"

"Oh, no," he answered. "It is very rare and the species is almost extinct. I myself have never seen one before, but I recognized it at once from the tales my grandfather used to tell. He had never seen one either, but he said that in his grandfather's days it was extremly common."

"It looks as tame as a domestic animal," I said, after another careful scrutiny. "I am going to try to catch it, for my fortune would be made if I could take it back with me to America, where none of the species have ever been seen, and where there are thirty million married men who would gladly pay a dollar for just one glance at a Contented Woman."

"Thereupon I advanced cautiously toward the remarkable creature, and as soon as I was within easy speaking distance I began trying to coax it to me.

"Come hither, my pretty dear," I said.

"Thank you, kind sir," it replied, for it found that it could speak excellent English, "but I am very well satisfied where I am."

"You have a miserable den," I replied, "that has no modern improvements, and I perceive that the parlor paper has not been changed for two years, and that the curtains at the windows are only imitation Irish point. All about you are much finer homes."

"Good Enough for Me"

"That is true," replied the strange creature, "but this is good enough for me."

"Your fur coat," I said, "is worn and mangy and not half so fine as that of many other animals."

"That is so," admitted the strange creature, "but it keeps me warm, and that is all that I need."

"It is a shame," I went on, "that one so young and beautiful and with such talent as you possess, should be buried out here in the woods where there are none to see and admire you. Do you not long for a career?"

"Not at all," replied the strange creature. "I have no desire to pose behind the footlights or see my name in print."

"But," continued I, "surely you must yearn to break into fashionable society, and to be one of those superior animals who look down upon the common herd."

No Desire for High Life

"Far from it," she answered, "I prefer the society of the plain, honest, true friends among whom I was born and with whom I have grown up."

"I perceive," I said, "that your husband does not provide you with every luxury."

"He is a noble creature," she replied, "who gives me everything that he can possibly afford. He toils from morning until night for me and our offspring, and denies himself many comforts for us, and I am filled with gratitude and appreciation whenever I think of all that he does for us."

"Surely he does not understand your higher nature," I urged, "and you must long for one who is a real soul mate."

"Perfectly Satisfied"

"There is nothing remarkable about me, and he understands me quite as well as I do him."

"And you are satisefid with him?" I inquired incredulously, "you do not think you have made a mistake in marrying him? You think him worthy of you?"

"I am perfectly satisfied with him," she replied, and at these words I was so overcome with amazement that I swooned, and when I recovered my consciousness the strange creature had fled. Nor did I ever see it again, although I kept watch about the spot for several days."

When the Old Traveler ceased speaking there was silence in the room for several minutes. Then the assembled company hissed one single word:

"Ananias!"

"THE HERITAGE OF HATE"

"THESE letters sent to her by Francis Heath were cruel and insulting enough to lash a passionate, high-spirited woman into a temporary madness of rage. Then, too, there is no doubt that there was a great deal of influence exerted in high quarters to save her from the scaffold, and her youth and beauty counted assuredly for something, too, in winning her mercy.

"Personally, I do not know anything about the affair; I only know what I have heard and read—just as you do, or any other stranger. I was only a boy of eleven when the crime occurred; and not only that, but on the day before it occurred I had been sent away from New York to pay a week's visit to an aunt in New Haven.

"And that reminds me that on the very morning after the tragedy I saw Wynn walking along the street near my aunt's house. It was very early—just getting light; I had come out early in my excitement at being in a strange place. I was looking through a gap in the hedge which divides my aunt's garden from the road, and I saw Wynn clearly. But he did not see me."

A Promise

"Only eighty miles from New York!" Sister Rachel exclaimed. "And he said in his evidence that he went to St. Louis on that same afternoon, immediately upon leaving the Heath mansion!"

She had uttered the words in a low voice, almost as if she were speaking to herself, and Alfred Harding did not clearly catch their meaning.

Apparently she had not intended him to do so, for she did not repeat them in answer to the questioning look he bent upon her.

She walked on in silence until they had come within sight of the row of cottages which was her destination. Then she turned to him with a new earnestness upon her handsome, haggard face.

"Promise me that—for your own sake—you will speak to Pauline Heath soon," she said. Her rich, clear voice had a world of pleading in it. Not only did she love him for the sake of his own manly and honorable nature, but she regarded him also as her sole refuge against Gilbert Wynn, the only one who could save her first-born child from marriage with a scoundrel and criminal.

He was surprised and touched by her interest in him. He looked at her, gratitude and devotion mingling with the ardent lovelight in the depths of his serious dark eyes.

"I will speak to her before many days are past," he answered, resolutely. "You have given me courage to do so."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Errand of Mercy

"HOW'S Mr. Heath, do you say? Oh, just the same as ever. It's my opinion he'll never be any different. He's got to be a regular old mole; you know he's about the place somewhere, but you don't often get a sight of him. Old Horrocks shakes his head over him, and says he thinks he ought to go out into society more. But I say he's best as he is. It's his nature to sit, year in and year out, rummagin' in dusty books, and never seeing a soul from outside but that Gilbert Wynn. He's happier so, that's what I think."

Sister Rachel had listened to these words with a faster beating heart. She was in the tenement room of a poor old widow, named Mrs. Anderson, whom she visited frequently, a bedridden woman over eighty years of age, who was almost entirely dependent for attention on the kindness of her neighbors.

This old woman had to-day stated that she expects her youngest niece to come in and see her. Great had been Sister Rachel's amazement when this youngest niece entered the room and revealed herself to be Martha Bullfield, the second housemaid at Heath Hall.

The nurse had at that moment been engaged in making the aged woman's bed, the invalid having been lifted out and made comfortable for the while on two chairs.

Barely responding to the newcomer's respectful, albeit curious, greeting, Sister Rachel had continued her work, with her head as much as possible averted. Martha Bullfield had been a servant at the Heath mansion in her day, and had been one of the first to whisper in the servants' quarters insidious suggestions of her guilt.

A dread of recognition had seized upon her first; she sought to hasten away. Then the mention of Mr. Heath arrested her.

A Revelation

Old Mrs. Anderson was slowly shaking her head in response to her visitor's remarks.

"They tell me he's been an altered man ever since his wife brought disgrace on him," she said. "'Twas natural enough, perhaps, that he should feel it. But you'd ha' thought he'd forget it all in the years that have gone by."

"Forget it all?" echoed Martha Bullfield. "Not he. It's my belief he's thinking of his first wife all day and every day, now; though you may be sure he never mentions her, nor allows anybody else in the hall to mention her.

"I must say I'd thought myself he'd forgot her until one of the other maids saw something a few days ago that told m[illegible] hadn't. She was in the back hall nea[illegible] private library, and thought he'd gone as she'd heard his door open and shut she looked into the library just to [illegible] sure.

"She gave quite a start when she [illegible] him gazing at a picture of his first wife, which had sure vanished for the last dozen years.

PUFFS UNDER EYES

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you kindly tell me what to do for puffs under the eyes? I have only had them for a short time and they are not very noticeable, but they worry me a great deal, for I know that there is something wrong and wish to make them disappear before they get any worse.
ANXIOUS.

PUFFS under the eyes as a rule denote something wrong with the physical condition and should be looked after by a physician. In the meantime be careful to eat nothing but simple foods and drink plenty of water. Breathe plenty of fresh air night and day, take daily baths, either cold sponges or tepid baths with a cold rinsing water. Also pinch up the skin under the eyes and roll it between the thumb and first finger gently, and massage deeply around the eyes, pressing hard with a rotary motion against the bony sockets all around the eyes. This stimulates the deep muscles.

CLEANSING CREAM

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you kindly tell me how to make good cleansing cream.
A. J.

MIX equal parts of orange flower water and oil of sweet almonds with half the amount of white wax. Apply with the tips of the fingers and when it has been rubbed in well all over the face wipe off with a cheesecloth towel. In making this cream melt the white wax and oil together, and beat in slowly the orange flower water, beating until the cream is cold.

ENLARGED PORES

DEAR PROFESSOR:
Will you please give me some simple remedy for obstinate enlarged pores which are left after blackheads?
LOLA.

MIX one dram of boric acid with four ounces of distilled witchhazel and dab the affected places with this on a piece of cotton or old linen. A little benzoin in water applied will help also.

The Kidnapping of Lady Elke

By Margery Stanley Clark

Synopsis.

ALLAS HOOD and Mona Elke are engaged to be married. Lady Elke, mother of Mona, is violently opposed the match and forbids a meeting be-een the two. Through conspiracy with dy Elke's butler, Dallas obtains admis-n to the house and has a word with na while Lady Elke is absorbed at dge.

Dallas forms a desperate plan to obtain stern mother's consent to the marriage, although the details are not told to na, she readily consents to be a party the plot. She obtains Lady Elke's con-t to meet what she supposes is a dress-ker on the following afternoon in an cure street in London.

The next day Lady Elke drives to the ssmaker's alone, for Mona pleads a adache. Admitted to a lonely room of dingy looking house by a maid she finds rself a prisoner. In a short time a te is thrust under the door telling her at she may have her liberty if she writes check for ten thousand pounds for her ptors. She is given until midnight to cide. At a quarter before 12 she writes r answer, agreeing to the conditions.

CHAPTER III.

Released.

AS midnight was brightly announced by the callous little clock the heavy steps sounded and paused without the door. Then, after a short silence, the gruff voice spoke: "Good. You are wise. Wait, and I shall back anon with the letters for you to rite."

"And, oh, please bring some food with u!" cried the prisoner anxiously. "I will y for all you provide."

"Then your bill will not be a heavy one we have no idea of pampering you!" and, th a mocking laugh, the heavy steps died ay.

And then as Lady Elke, overcome by such uelty, dropped despairingly onto a chair, ere was a sudden noise, as of a scuffle, d a cry of "You villain!"

With a bound Lady Elke flew to the or. Surely she knew that voice.

"Dallas! Help! Help!" she cried.

"All right, don't be afraid—I am coming you!" and a moment later the door was enched open and Lady Elke was in a sition that her daughter had often occupied—in Dallas Hood's arms.

"Dallas, Dallas, you have saved me!" ied the poor lady; and between joy and nger she nearly fainted, but revived in ne to ejaculate: "The demons, have you t them?"

"No, I'm afraid they've slipped off," swered the young man.

"ever mind, the police will soon be r tracks."

onspirator

minutes later a cab containing lke and her rescuer rolled swiftly Queen's Gate.

ut how did you discover me, Dallas?" y Elke asked. Her composure a little recovered, she was beginning to get curious. "Those wretches declared that no one would find me out."

"They reckoned without me," Dallas answered. "I am afraid, Lady Elke, that I have a confession to make. However, I will throw myself on your mercy. You see, the reason I discovered your abduction was that I went to see Mona this evening, although you had forbidden me to do so and ordered your servants not to admit me."

"Ah!" said Lady Elke sharply. "Then how did you get in?"

"As to that you must not ask me," Dallas answered. "I am telling you this in confidence, and you will, I know, understand that I managed it by great good luck, aided by the usual key—of a solid gold metal."

"Upon my word," ejaculated Lady Elke. "Merryman shall go."

"Surely not," said Dallas coolly, "when but for the fact that he was soft-hearted"——

"Easily corrupted, you mean," snapped her ladyship.

"That may have had something to do with it," Dallas said firmly, "but if he had not been a good-hearted fellow he would never have risked losing a place like yours for any paltry sum I could give him. But for Merryman you might still be enjoying the kidnappers' hospitality."

Her ladyship shivered slightly and did not answer.

"Having got in," continued Dallas blandly, "Mona and I had a few happy moments, after all the wretched weeks we have passed since you took it into your head for a whim to forbid our engagement."

"It was no whim." Lady Elke pulled herself together and tried to speak angrily. "I am her mother, and I decided that you could not give her all she had a right to ask. Therefore I very properly broke off the engagement."

"And both our hearts," finished Dallas. "Yes, that was what you were doing, for Mona would never have consented to marry without you leave."

"I should think not!" retorted Lady Elke.

"No—she was so good and obedient," Dallas returned hotly, "that she would have tried to please you, though it meant the ruin of her life. For she loves me, Lady Elke, as dearly as I love her. I know I could make her perfectly happy and give her all she wants in reason."

"I know all about that," Lady Elke spoke gruffly. "Get on to how you found out about me."

"After a few moments Mona happened to mention the fact that you had gone off to see a sick friend and would be away for some days. She said that a cabman had brought a verbal message, and she seemed surprised that you should have gone away without telling her that you meant to do so.

White Lies

"Somehow, the whole story sounded so funny that, without alarming Mona, I determined to make inquiries. Mona had told me that, as far as she knew, you had left Queen's Gate this afternoon with the intention of going to see a dressmaker at Earl's Court. So, when I left her, it being a fine night, I determined to call at No. 66 Boundary road and ask if you had been there.

"However, on my way, I passed a couple of hours, so that it had struck 12 when I arrived at No. 66. I was just wondering on what pretext I could call and inquire at that hour, when the door was opened and a man looked out, wearing a black mask.

"At sight of me he gave a cry, and though I tried to stop him dashed past me down the street. Then the next thing I heard was your voice crying for help, and you know the rest. I wish I had nabbed the villain."

"I am not sure," said Lady Elke slowly, "that it is not better that he escaped. You arrived in time to prevent him achieving his object, and as regards revenge I would rather forego it than that the case should get into the papers."

"Then you don't wish me to speak to the police about it?"

"No, for the police would mean the papers. I don't want to see 'The Kidnapping of Lady Elke' all over the place."

And Lady Elke shuddered as she thought how her dearest friends would gloat over the fact of her being bullied out of ten thousand pounds.

"I don't want any one to know, except, perhaps, Mona," she said decidedly. "Promise me, Dallas. You shall not regret it."

Reconciliation

The young man gave the required promise with a light heart. His scheme had succeeded utterly, only his elaborate precautions about taking the house and airing the maid servant through some one else had been needless. No inquiry would ever be made into the affair. The kidnappers would be free to continue their nefarious career. And Dallas smiled as he thought of the ultimatum safely reposing in his breast pocket.

"I suppose every one will be in bed," Lady Elke said, as the cab drew up before her house.

"Mona will, but I gave Merryman a hint to remain up till about 1 o'clock in case you returned," Dalals replied.

Lady Elke climbed the steps wearily and rang the bell.

"Pay the cabman for me, Dallas," she said. "If you are to be my son-in-law you may as well make yourself useful."

The door was opened as she spoke by Merryman, and Lady Elke entered.

"Miss Mona has gone to bed, of course?" she inquired.

Before the butler could reply Mona's head appeared over the banisters.

"Darling mamma, is that you? I couldn't rest. I have been so anxious. I am so glad you are back."

"Yes, I am back," Lady Elke replied, "and I have brought some one back with me, or, more correctly, he has brought me back. Merryman, Mr. Hood will sleep here to-night."

"Yes, your ladyship."

"And, by the way, Merryman," Lady Elke added in a voice that convinced the butler that in some way she had discovered his crime—"by the way, I've something to say to you."

For a moment Lady Elke glared at him, and then the memory of a brightly lit little room, and a cheerful ticking clock occurred to her, and she turned away.

"Give me something to eat this moment," she said, "for I'm starving."

How to Get Rid of Fat

A Remarkable Discovery That Can Reduce Fat Harmlessly at the Rate of a Pound a Day.

A Trial Box Sent Free.

A quick, harmless reducer of fat has come into popular use which far eclipses any method or treatment heretofore used.

Starvation diets break down the health almost invariably, as is commonly witnessed among many former fat folks who have tried to starve their fat away.

Dangerous drugs and mineral acids can now be put on the shelf.

You Eat Rengo Like You Would Fruit or Candy.

In their stead, many physicians are now prescribing Rengo, which among other things contains the extracts of some tropical fruits, and which has a remarkable faculty not only of reducing the fat quickly and in a natural way, but also makes the nerves strong, digestion vigorous and mus les more brawny, leaving what once as a weak, blubbery, bloated victim of a normal, vigorous, muscular person. ngo has the faculty of compelling er assimilation of food and driving off surplus abnormal tissue present. hus, no tiresome exercises are necess and there is no interference with 's daily labors.

tengo is very pleasant to take, and it hewed like candy. It attacks abnormal ssue with unerring accuracy, and causes gradual, harmless but effective reduction n weight, and without leaving wrinkles which are nearly always present after taking drugs and other dangerous materials commonly called "anti-fats."

There is only one company in the United States making this remedy and that is the Rengo Company at Detroit, Mich. For some time they have made it a practice of sending out trial boxes of this remarkable treatment to anyone who sends them their name and address.

We recommend that any one suffering from excess fat, prove to his or her own satisfaction what this powerful product can do, and just send for a box on trial. Address The Rengo Co.

PLAN ANOTHER MORSE STRIKE

Although the Morse combine has just granted an increase in wages to the officers of sixty-one steamers on its various lines, it faces another strike of officers on the Eastern Steamship Company, running from Boston to St. John, Bangor, Bath and Portland. The strike just concluded was upon lines operating from New York, and did not extend East. Captain Luther B. Dow, who engineered the strike in New York, has been in Boston and Portland, and it is said he has made arrangements for concerted action. The officers will ask an increase of from $15 to $25 per month, it is said.

GREAT BARRINGTON, June 1.—When Joseph Culnen, a German, with his family, consisting of three sons and one daughter, arrived here five years ago they were almost penniless in a strange land, with no knowledge of the language or customs of the country. To-day they are returning to the small town of Kesslan with just $10,920, representing the combined earnings and savings of the entire family for the time they have been here.

GIRL WHO WED ON DARE

'WILL YOU WED?' HE SAID; SHE DID ON A DARE

Naval Officer About to Sail for Europe Wins Beautiful Bride by Quick Proposal.

CHASE FOR CLERGYMAN

NEW YORK, May 31.—Because she would not take a dare, Miss Isabelle St. George Joyce of Philadelphia is now the bride of Lieutenant James R. Combs of the United States armored cruiser Washington. The wedding took place in the Red Room at Jack's restaurant, in Sixth avenue, at the early hour of 4:44 o'clock.

The exact hour is given, because Lieutenant Combs is the authority, and he knows. The lateness, or rather earliness, of the hour was due to the ignorance of the Rev. Dr. Henry Marsh Warren, who did not know the location of Jack's and spent two long hours hunting for it before he found it.

Miss Joyce, who is now Mrs. Combs, came to New York with friends, including her girl chum, Miss Eleanor Bennett, to attend a party on board the cruiser Charleston at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, by Lieutenant Combs, in honor of his engagement.

After the party a visit was made to the Army and Navy Club, and from there a party, including Lieutenant Combs and his fiancee, Miss Bennett and Lieutenants Cooper and McIntyre, went to Jack's restaurant in order that the Philadelphia young women might see a little of the night life of New York, as represented by the cosmopolitan character diners.

It was while they were dining that the Lieutenant broke the news that his ship is soon to leave New York for the European station. Miss Joyce looked thoughtful and when the Lieutenant whisperingly asked her if she would not like to get married right away, she smiled, but said nothing. It was not until she spied a branch of faded mock orange flowers that he received an answer. She placed the spray in her hair, saying:

"See what I have here. Now I need a man, a ring and a minister." Lieutenant Combs at once announced he would be the man and dared her to be married in Jack's. She accepted the dare. One of the Lieutenant's friends telephoned for Dr. Warren. The doctor started at once, but he was a long time reaching Jack's. When he arrived the Red Room was being decorated and a wedding ring had been purchased of a waiter, who said it had been his mother's.

GIRL, JILTED BY RICH CLUBMAN, TAKES POISON

NEW YORK, June 1.—Because her love for Hamilton Pell, a young club and society man of the fashionable Weschester suburb of Bronxville, was not returned, a beautiful New York girl, whose identity is a mystery, made two desperate attempts to take her life at the Hotel Gramatan in Lawrence Park.

In the second attempt she swallowed two bi-chloride of mercury tablets, containing, the physicians say, enough poison to kill a dozen men, and her life was only saved after most heroic measures.

Guests, who were near at hand, forced her to take an antidote and resident physicians used a stomach pump despite her fierce struggles to have the poison do its work.

The identity of the young woman is a closely guarded secret of Hamilton Pell and a few of his intimates. She was not registered at the hotel, it was declared, last night, and all that is known of her is that her first name is Adell and that she lives in Manhattan.

Young Hamilton Pell is a direct descendent of Thomas Pell, who obtained an original grant to the lands around Bronxville from the Mohegan Indian Sachem Gramatan as far back as 1654. He is related to the Pells who are prominent in New York society, and lives near Armour Villa Park, one of the sub-divisions of Bronxville village.

He was one of the dinner party of three men and three women at the Hotel Gramatan. They were hardly seated when two dashing young women, strangers to the regular guests, entered the dining room and took a neighboring table.

Girl Writes Note to Pell.

The younger girl wrote a brief note.

"Take this to Mr. Pell," she said to the bellboy who answered her call. "I will wait here for the answer."

"Mr. Pell says there is no answer," is the message the boy is said to have brought.

Those who were watching the young woman saw a frown of disappointment cross her pretty face and her eyes flashed angrily.

She dropped a white tablet into a glass half full of wine and watched it dissolve. The tablet was of mercury and deadly. Then, rising to her feet, she cried: "I might as well be dead," and raising the glass to her lips, quaffed it before the eyes of the horrified diners, who sat powerless to prevent the act.

With a shriek, the other girl grabbed the glass and succeeded in spilling its contents.

A few minutes later the girls went to the wide south piazza and in the half darkness, the lovelorn one succeeded in swallowing two of the tablets while they were standing under one of the Moorish arches.

Cries in Agony as Poison Works.

The poison began to work after a minute, and she cried out in agony. Her friend sent an imperative message to young Pell, which sent him into the ballroom, white faced and trembling, in search of Doctor Allen, the house physician.

The doctor was not to be found, but a guest who knew something of poisons volunteered his assistance. With young Pell's help, quantities of milk were forced down the girl's throat.

She fought them tooth and nail, and paid no attention to young Pell's pleadings, in which he recpeatedly called her "Adel." They persisted, however, and to their prompt efforts she owes her life.

$100,000 FIRE IN OIL WORKS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

TITUSVILLE, Pa., June 1.—A destructive fire swept eight acres of the manufacturing district of this place early to-day, causing a loss estimated at $100,000. The fire broke out in the Harris oil and grease works, and burned the Harris machine works, the Harris and Barrett houses, the Herley machine shop, the Harris skating rinks and ten three-story houses.

Anty Drudge Goes to the Theatre Even on Monday Nights.

Anty Drudge—"Won't you go to the theatre with me to-night, Mrs. Hardwork?"

Mrs. Hardwork—"No, thank you. I never go anywhere on Monday night. I'm always tired out with washing all day."

Anty Drudge—"Why don't you use Fels-Naptha soap as Mrs. Nuway does? Then you wouldn't be tired and your wash would be drying on the line before noon."

You wrong Fels-Naptha, and do an injustice to yourself, if you use Fels-Naptha as an ordinary soap with hot water. It is deadly to dirt, and grease, and germs in cold or lukewarm water. You don't know what snow-white clothes are till you see them washed with Fels-Naptha.

Lots of other ways Fels-Naptha will save you work and time. Directions for all its uses on the red and green wrapper.

Bob Unglaub's non-progressing Pilgrims will endeavor to inaugurate the month of June with a victory from the Highlanders this afternoon. The Pilgrims have certainly been pursuing a rough and thorny path up to date this season, but the new Hub leader is confident that he will be able to lead them successfully through the maze of defeats they have gotten themselves into.

These are certainly dark and gloomy days for the poor, hard-working Pilgrims, and the fans are not able to understand how a team which possesses such admirable timber is so unsuccessful in its engagements. There is one thing certain, the boys are not batting as they should, and not only that, but they seem to lose their heads, or their thinking machines stop absolutely whenever the opposition tries to pull off a squeeze play, or the like.

Highlanders Played Inside Ball.

Yesterday's contest between the Pilgrims and the Highlanders was a good sample of how to and not to play ball. The work of the visitors was a delightful contrast to the game put up by the Bostons. The Highlanders put up the style of inside ball that the Bostons used so well when they won their last pennant in 1904.

However, it is not too late to mend. The Bostons have the fans still with them, and if they show the Hub rooters that they are able to put up the scrappy, inside ball they once exhibited the attendance figures at the local park will once more soar to the heights they once held.

Visitors May Get Setback.

The Pilgrims are going to turn over a new leaf and trounce the agile Highlanders. Clarke Griffith's mighty band, who think they have a good chance to cop the pennant honors this season, may get a setback they don't expect to-day. Ralph Glaze, who is in good shape, may pitch for the Bostons, while Earl Moore, the former Cleveland pitcher, may do the twirling stunts for the visitors.

The Highlanders won the first game here, which marked the opening of a long home engagement for the Pilgrims, by a score of 4 to 1.

For five innings neither side scored, but in the sixth each side tallied one run, and in the seventh the visitors got after Winter and, with the aid of some dumb playing by the Bostons, scored three more.

George Winter pitched fairly well for the Bostons, while Frank Kitson, procured from the Senators, did well for New York.

WILL RACE ON CHARLES TO-DAY

The Harvard freshman second crew and the Springfield High School crew will race on the Charles River at 6 o'clock this evening over the one and one-qurter-mile course, ending at the Union Boathouse. As the freshmen are in an unsettled condition, the chances of winning seem to favor Springfield.

The orders of the crews will be as follows:

Freshman Second—Stroke, Hurd; 7, Beard; 6, Davis; 5, MacLeod; 4, Waide; 3, Hadden; 2, Jose; bow, H. Morgan; coxswain, Warren.

Springfield High—Stroke, Alstron; 7, Hicks; 6, Parsons; 5, Wilson; 4, Bennett; 3, Read; 2, Mathison; bow, Foster; coxswain, Lincoln.

VOLKMAN WON ROWING FINAL

Volkman had little trouble winning the final race in the Boston Interscholastic championship rowing regatta on the Charles River, Noble and Greenough being second, Cambridge Latin third and Boston Latin fourth.

In the race for second crews Noble and Greenough was first, Cambridge Latin second, English high third, Volkmann fourth and Roxbury Latin fifth.

Intercollegiate Track Championship Finals Are Todav

YALE STOCK TAKES BOOM FOR HONORS

Who is going to win the intercollegiate track championships this afternoon in the Stadium is the puzzling question which is troubling the experts, who can't figure the thing out with the seventeen colleges competing in the race for the points. Of course it is an easy matter to say who won't win the championship, and it can be safely stated that the honor lies with Pennsylvania, Yale and Cornell, with the other colleges picking off the stray points, which will cut into the totals of the above three. Which will come off victorious will depend greatly upon which of the trio is the least disturbed in its regular accumulation of figures.

As a result of yesterday's trials Yale stock has taken a sudden soom, and Pennsylvania, the prime favorite, has fallen below par.

Penn has this much in her favor, that she can bank on twenty points through the efforts of three men, and it devolves on the rest of the team to make Mike Murphy's cup of joy brimful to-night.

The 100-yard dash, which comes at 3 o'clock, first on the programme, will bring the sprinters out for the semi-finals. Cartmell, the Penn flyer, who won last year, appears about ripe for another victory, judging from his work in the trials, when he won his heat with less effort than any other heat winner.

Gamble is a Good One.

Roulin Miller, the Princeton dash runner, would seem to be the second choice in the century dash. He shaped up best next to Cartmell. Princeton has another good one in Gamble. Yale has three men—Burch, Butler and Stevens—eligible, and the Elis may figure in the marking up.

The surprise in the dash was the shutting out of Witham of Penn, who won second last year, and Lockwood of Harvard also failed to connect.

The semi-finals in the 120-yard hurdles come after the dash. Shaw, the Dartmouth wonder, is accorded first place without any hesitation. He cleared the sticks without toppling one, and did the best time in the trials yesterday. The fight for second place is hard to pick. Hubbard of Amherst and Garrels of Michigan are about evenly paired. Rand of Harvard, Armstrong of Princeton, Howe of Yale, Merrill of Williams are the others who will contest in the event.

Taylor, the colored whirlwind from Penn, is slated to win the quarter, and it looks as if Coholan of Yale is the only one to give him any battle. They ran first and second yesterday, the time being 49 4-5 seconds, but Taylor had it easy enough. Princeton has a couple of runners in it, while Harvard has Young. Sweet of Amherst, Henrie of Swarthmore and French of Cornell are the others who will score from the gun.

Shaw, the hurdle king, may find it harder to win the 220-yard hurdles. Cornell has three good ones in this, while Hubbard of Amherst, Garrels of Michigan, Armstrong of Princeton, Merrill of Williams and Mason of Harvard have a chance to count.

It may be Cartmell and Witham, both of Penn, again this year in the 220-yard dash, as they both won their heats in the trials, and Young of Syracuse also got one. Harvard has Dodge and Lockwood in the ranks, and may manage to get some points here.

Cornell Should Get Bulk.

The half-mile run is a very uncertain quantity. Cornell has four runners on the card and should get the bulk of the points. Michigan has two clever ones in Coe, the runner with the long stride, and Ramey, who has never been beaten. Parsons, the erratic Yale runner, qualified, and the record holder may show a bit of his old form. The Cornell men know how to use team work, and with four of them together ought to out-jockey the field.

Michigan should win the shotput with Garrells. He made a put of 46 feet yesterday, but fouled unnecessarily. He made the next best put at that, running second to Krueger of Swarthmore. Yale and Harvard and Cornell will go after the remaining points.

Penn puts its faith on Moffitt to beat Marshall in the high jump, and whether he does the job will affect Penn's chances greatly. Harvard will scrape up a few points with two entries ready.

Horr of Syracuse has a cinch on the hammer throw, and Cornell will add to its score. Kersburg of Harvard is in the game too.

Knox is sure of the broad jump, while Michigan may run second and third.

Again will Yale swell its total in the pole vault. Dray and Gilbert are the leaders. These two, with Swain of Penn and Allen of Syracuse, were the only ones to get over 11 feet 6 inches yesterday.

Penn must make a big effort to get in front on the mile and two-mile runs. Haskins, the present mile champion, may do the trick if he keeps out of the half, where he is eligible.

The showing of the Michigan athletes in the trials was very good. Every one entered, with the exception of Schultz in the shot, qualified for the finals in the events in which they competed.

TRAINERS BUSY AT READVILLE

With the month of June once more here the local trainers have just begun stepping their horses along a might faster at the Readville track, but they are in an easy frame of mind regarding speed, as none expect to do any racing before next month at the earliest.

Fred Clark has ridden the fastest mile this Spring, having stepped Grattan Boy, Jr., a mile right close to the 2:20 notch, with the last half in 1:07¾. Burma Girl he has circled the course in 2:23 and moved her eighths at a 2:08 gait.

Jimmy Gatcomb comes next in the list of working trainers, as he gave Grace Bond, 2:09¾, a trip in 2:21½. She is looking in the best of health and is liable to repeat her winning performances of a three-year-old. Audubon Boy, 1:59¼, has had no tearing out miles, Gatcomb being content to scull him a lot of miles around the 2:25 point to strengthen his uspicious leg.

Henry Titer has not done much of account with his record horses, but asked Blue Hill, 2:15¾, his futurity candidate, to jog the last eighths of miles at a 2:12 to 2:15 clip. He likes the two-year-old colt, Silver Baron, by Baron Silver, 2:25¾, the property of Charles Carroll of South Boston. A three-year-old by Bingen, owned by John T. O'Connor of Boston, has stepped over to the quarter in 35 seconds, and he never saw a race track till the middle of April.

"Doc" King is raving most of the time over D. W. Caton's three-year-old Aquin, that last season trotted a mile in 2:24. "Doc" has not asked hi mto beat 2:30 yet, but it is only a jog for him to step quarters in 33 seconds. He is in some of the big futurities of next Fall and is liable to count in the final reckoning.

The addition of John Young and Fred Hyde to the colony has livened up affairs considerably around the knockers' corner. A little warmer weather and George eLavitt will occupy his favorite chair, too.

OUTING FOR BAY STATE AUTOISTS ON JUNE 17

By J. C. Kerrison.

With the race meet out of the way, the members of the Bay State Automobile Association are now looking forward to the annual outing on June 17. Although the touring committee has made no announcement whatever, it has by no means been idle. Instead it has been doing considerable work to bring about what it hopes will prove fully as enjoyable an outing as those that have gone before. A departure will be made from the course followed in previous years, in that the clubs will not this season go to Rye Beach. Instead the touring committee has two places in mind, one on the South and the other on the North Shore, both of which are within easy riding distance of this city and both possessing attractions for the majority. Just which of the two places will be selected has not yet been determined, but the members can rest assured that the committee will do that which in its best judgment is considered as bringing the greatest pleasure to the members.

There seemed to be an air of general satisfaction among the local motorists yesterday as a result of the 100 and the 50-mile races under the auspices of the Bay State Association held on Thursday. There was not a single kick heard, and everyone seemed thoroughly contented with the result.

The showing made by the steamer in the 50-mile event was rather a surprise considering the fact that in practice she had reeled off several successive miles pretty close to the 1:05 mark, and had gone long distances without having to replenish her water supply. Her showing, however, in actual competition was hardly in keeping with her practice work, she coming off the track several times during the 50-mile event, and those who had looked forward to her running away with the event were rather surprised. The Jackson held her at all stages of the game, and had the latter not experienced tire trouble in profusion she would certainly have made a stronger showing. She had nothing to gain by fighting the steamer, which she led by about six miles when Burman tackled the steamer. The Jackson certainly drove a good fast race, even though she lost to others. Morrison was perhaps the most disappointed man of the whole field, as he at one time had the 100-mile event well in hand and was doing nicely when he first threw his shoe and then experienced a leaky radiator. He said yesterday that of course he was sorry, but the fact that both his other entries, the Oldsmobiles, won their respective classes was satisfaction enough for one day. Lewis, who with the Frayer-Miller won third in the 100, placed all his troubles at the door of a piece of waste which got into the feed pipe of his car, and refused to permit sufficient fuel to pass when the car was traveling at high speed.

The past week has been a busy one for the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. In every instance the activity of the various departments and branches has denoted the progressiveness which is characteristic of the association in accomplishing something of benefit or interest to the automobile industry or the furtherance of one of its main objects—the prosecution of infringers of the Selden patent. The complete victory gained by the association in winning the Searchmont suit was only part of the work of the legal department of the week, as some infringing manufacturers and dealers discovered. Following up the suits against infringers of the Selden patent, on which papers were served some time ago, the owners of the patent have filed suits and papers have been served by the United States Marshal on four additional manufacturers of unlicensed cars or their representatives, viz.: Mora Motor Car Company (Mora), Daimler Manufacturing Company (American Mercedes), Oscar Lear Auto Company (Frayer-Miller and York Motor Car Company (York).

PROVIDENCE, June 1.—Ma nager Hugh Duffy of the Providence team is very much encouraged by the way his boys are playing now. It is a pleasing contrast to their work earlier in the season. He still figures that the Grays have a chance for the Eastern League pennant, despite their low position in the race. Three more games will be played with the Bisons, who were beaten yesterday. There will be games today, to-morrow and Monday. Kissenger will probably twirl for the visitors, and Cronin for the locals.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—Imbued with hope because of the successful opening of their first long trip away from home, the Boston Doves will go into the second game in their series with the Quakers this afternoon determined upon following up their good showing of yesterday and scoring another victoroy.

Pfeffer, the big southpaw twirler of the visitors, will probably be sent to the firing line by Manager Tenney, while Manager Murray of the locals will probably appoint Sparks to deliver the pellets.

Manager Tenney Pleased.

Tenney was much pleased with the start made by his boys, and he predicts a most successful trip on the road for them. He figures that his boys will be pretty near able to win half of their games, and if they do this he says they will surely land a place in the first division this season, as he counts upon them putting up gilt-edge ball on their next home stay.

"Vive" Lindaman was the pilot to steer the Boston craft to victory yesterday by a score of 6 to 3. For eight innings he simply was invincible, by reason of the grand control he had of his spit-ball. In the ninth he lost his bearings for a time, and the Philadelphias scored their three runs and only runs of the game.

Pittinger Was Batted Hard.

Pittenger, the former Boston twirler, was on the rubber for the home team and he was batted hard and often. In six innings the visitors scored nine hits and four runs, and he was taken out of the box and McCloskey, who was not much of an improvement, substituted.

Outside of their good stick-work, the Bostons outshone their rivals in fielding, nearly all of the Hub fielders making star catches.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

It took one hour to play the first four innings.

Lindaman had the Phillies guessing all the way to the ninth.

Captain-Manager Tenney made a complete change in the batting order. It worked well.

The first three runs were made one at a time on bunches of two hits.

Only one hit was made off Lindaman until the ninth.

Ritchey retired the side in the eighth inning.

Lindaman gave but one base on balls.

Nine hits were made off Pittenger before he was yanked out.

The Phillies were only able to score when Lindaman with the game all his own let up in the ninth.

Ritchey played a star game at second accepting eight chances without an error.

Fourteen Phillies died at first.

The Phillies have let Pitcher McQuillan go and have secured outfielder Osborne of the Chicago club.

Every Boston player made a hit except Brain. Howard had three.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

Roxbury Storage Salesrooms

WHERE BRAINY ECONOMICAL PEOPLE BUY ANY MAKE PIANO—RIGHT

A great many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Salesrooms. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage salesrooms, the price is simply put on, first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Bargains Beginning Monday, May 27

We would advise you to make up your mind to buy your Piano this coming week as soon as circumstances will allow you. There were not enough Pianos in the lot to last through Saturday, May 25, and we do not take any from the accounts for sale until Mondays—People who get in and buy Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays get tremendous bargains—Every Piano is tuned by our expert and is at concert pitch before coming into our salesroom—We let no Piano go out before being assured of its excellent condition.

Daughters of the Revolution, and That Kitten

The Kitten Told How Her Grandmother Caught Mice

The Daughters of the American Revolution are all that they pretend to be, and more. Their insteps are high, their necks are swanny, their blood would make good blue ink if it were not more useful otherwise.

These ladies meet and elect one another to office, and they talk and have tea. A real European queen could do no more.

Each Daughter tells how high up in the army her ancestor was, and how he practically made this country a possibility. Each is painstakingly accurate, and it seems almost like sacrilege to ask these charming Daughters to do anything except talk about their aristocratic past. Nevertheless, WE MUST tell them about the Maltese kitten.

This kitten was good looking. Among cats she ranked like a Daughter of the American Revolution among men. The kitten sat around and spent her time telling how many mice her grandmother had caught. But she didn't catch any mice herself; it took all of her time to tell about the grandmother. One fine day there was a splash in a small pond, and the kitten with the grandmother was missing.

A heartless owner had decided that the mice the grandmother killed were dead, and the kitten might as well be like them.

The moral of this story, for the Boston Chapter of the aristocratic Daughters of the American Revolution, is that they ought to do something else besides meet at some Back Bay hotel, take tea, elect one another to office and talk about the past.

We observe that over in New York city they have opened formally the magnificent old Jumel Mansion up on the Hudson. This magnificent house has been given to the Daughters of the American Revolution at public expense. And the Daughters kindly take care of it. They have it dusted and artistically arranged. Every once in awhile they go up there, take tea and tell something more about their grandfathers.

This is our suggestion to the Daughters of the American Revolution:

Try for a little while thinking less about the grandfathers of the past, AND MORE ABOUT THE BABIES OF THE PRESENT.

You have come into possession of a house with beautiful fresh air, a beautiful view, large rooms—JUST THE PLACE TO KEEP A LOT OF POOR BABIES AND THEIR MOTHERS HAPPY IN THE HOT SUMMER MONTHS.

On the East Side of the big city upon which you look down as you sit taking tea there are tens of thousands of mothers and children that suffer from heat in Summer. If you want to please those old grandfathers of yours, and be worthy of the lives they led, GO DOWN INTO THE EAST SIDE AND INVITE THE MOTHERS AND THE SICK YOUNG CHILDREN TO COME UP AND SPEND THE AFTERNOON IN YOUR FINE JUMEL MANSION.

Instead of tea bring up a few very large cans of pure pasteurized milk. Give it to the mothers for what it actually costs, or, better still, for nothing.

Let the children play around on the grass and roll down the steps, and let the tired mothers sit in comfortable chairs on the verandas that the public has given to you.

Those of the Daughters of the American Revolution that have grandfathers but no babies of their own could keep themselves wisely busy looking after poor mothers and babies in the hot Summer.

We have no doubt that the mothers of the babies would listen patiently and gratefully to tales of past grandeur.

In any event, we are positive that the Daughters of the American Revolution would find themselves happier in doing something FOR THE BABIES OF TO-DAY than in merely taking tea and discussing the grandfathers of the past.

The mouse that was killed and the grandfather that fought and bled a hundred years ago are all very well as a memory, BUT WHAT YOU ACTUALLY DO TO-DAY IS WHAT COUNTS.

When Will the Old Goose Say:

"I'll Keep the Golden Eggs for Myself"?

It is Lord Rothschild's turn to be worried. He is the London Lord Rothschild, and, like some other modern gentlemen, he thinks that the world is going to the bow-wows when it becomes difficult for him to make a million or two in a week without working.

His idea of a perfectly organized society is one in which a few rich gentlemen—Rothschilds, Vanderbilts, etc.—can sit back at their ease, press buttons and make millions by producing nothing, while the man that WORKS makes two dollars.

Lord Rothschild says that the "Socialistic" effort to tax incomes in France is very, very sad. And he is bothered also about the fact that in the United States the people are daring to ask some questions about the railroads.

With rare originality of thought, Lord Rothschild remarks: "The public are killing the goose that laid the golden eggs."

That is ONE view of the case. But it is the ROTHSCHILD view. It is the view of the gentleman who goes out to the goose nest each morning, picks up the golden egg, sticks it in his pocket and walks back again, considering that he has done a worthy day's work.

There is also the GOOSE to be heard from. This is the column in which that poor goose occasionally gets a word in edgewise.

On behalf of the goose, we should like to ask Lord Rothschild and others this:

WHY SHOULDN'T THE GOOSE KEEP A FEW OF THE GOLDEN EGGS THAT SHE LAYS? SHE HAS LAID ABOUT FIVE HUNDRED MILLION GOLDEN EGGS FOR THE ROTHSCHILDS, A THOUSAND MILLION GOLDEN EGGS FOR ROCKEFELLER, A COUPLE OF HUNDRED MILLION GOLDEN EGGS EACH FOR THE GOULDS, VANDERBILTS, ETC.

Isn't it about time for this goose to turn around as soon as the golden egg is laid, put her pitiful yellow, webbed foot on it and say, even to Lord Rothschild, "You have had enough of my eggs, I am going to KEEP this one and a few others. Maybe, if I keep a dozen and hatch them out, I shall be happier than I have been in the past, always laying the eggs and always seeing you collect them"?

Little Editorials from the People

WHAT IS HAPPINESS?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

You ask "What Is Happiness?" Frankly, I do not know. I do not believe there is much real happiness on earth, nor can there be under existing conditions. Human beings seem to be divided into two classes, the plunderers and those who are plundered. The plunderers cannot be happy because the very traits in their nature that cause them to prey on their fellow men render them incapable of being satisfied with what they have, no matter how much it may be. As for those who are plundered, they are unhappy because they suffer injustice and have no redress. If such a thing as a "square deal" were to be found on earth, we might have a chance to find out what happiness is.

Mrs. Jones Gets Acquainted Some

By Morton Birge

THE Joneses moved yesterday.

Jones, who couldn't get the day off for the moving, came home at night and found Mrs. Jones tired, but not unhappy.

"I hope, my dear," said Jones, as he sat down to a picked up supper, "that you'll get acquainted around our new neighborhood. This seems like a nice place. Probably you'll get to know the neighbors in a few weeks."

Mrs. Jones—Oh, I am a little acquainted already, though I've been here only a day.

Jones—Is that so?

Mrs. Jones, with enthusiasm—Oh, yes, yes, indeed! The lady upstairs, her name is Ksmith. They're of the Connecticut Ksmiths and they've been here a year. Mrs. Ksmith came down to ask me if I needed anything and she talked a minute. Her husband works for the city, yes, but he hopes to get a job with a furniture house through Mrs. Ksmith's sister, Mrs. Dabwax, that was Ellen Vanderwater—Mrs. Nott, she lives in the next block, you know——

Jones—No, I didn't know, how should I?

Mrs. Jones—O, of course, but I thought you would have noticed the name on the door. The flat with the imitation lace curtains. I saw them right off. Well, I wondered what sort of a place Mrs. Nott had, and so I went in there this morning and asked her if she could tell me a good grocer here, so I could see her place. It is comfortable but cheap, you know. Her husband is a master mechanic, and when work is steady he earns real good money. They are planning to build a house next Spring, as Mrs. Nott misses the chickens so. Mrs. Nott doesn't speak to the Sillshaws overhead——

Jones—Thought Mrs. Whad'jecallum, t'other woman, lived over us?

Mrs. Jones—O, I mean over the Notts. Mrs. Nott told me about it, and then when I saw Mrs. Sillshaw I got the other side of the story, and I must say I don't blame Mrs. Sillshaw, though of course you never can tell, as I said at the time Uncle Henry and Cousin Amelia fell out and there was blame on both sides. Well, as I was saying—

Jones—You seem to know 'em all.

Mrs. Jones—O, no, I only just heard a few things to-day. I was so busy, what with the moving and straightening things out that I didn't have time to really get acquainted with anyone. I met a Mrs. Hamsetty across the street and gave her my recipe for daffodil biscuits. Where are you going dear?

Jones—To see if I can dig up a drug store. I want some cigars.

Mrs. Jones—There's one three blocks to the right at the end of the street, Mr. Nephry is the druggist. I was over there at noon to get some arnica. When you get back I'll tell some interesting things I learned from Mrs. Nephry. She was tending store while her husband was eating lunch, the clerk having eloped last night with the daughter of a cabinet maker named McGrilly, who lives on the next street. Before you go, Augustus, I want to say that I think we'll like it here. I'm sure I will, after I get acquainted.

Begin Today to Learn the Great Art of Getting All the Enjoyment Possible Out of the Present

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

DO you know what a wonderfully complicated thing a human being is? Every feature, every portion of your body, every motion you make, reflects your mental organization.

I know a woman past middle life who has always been on the opposite side of every question discussed in her presence.

She was agnostic with the orthodox, reverential with atheists, liberal with the narrow, bigoted with the liberal.

Whatever belief any one expressed on any subject, she invariably took the other extreme. She loved to disagree with her fellow-men. It was her pastime.

Now, to walk with that woman in silence is merely to carry on a wordless argument.

You cannot regulate your steps so they will harmonize with hers. She will be just ahead of or just behind you, and if you want to turn to the left she pulls to the right. A promenade with her is more exhausting than a day's labor.

She is not conscious of it, and would think any one very unreasonable and unjust who told her of her peculiarities.

A Fruitless Quest

I KNOW a woman who all her life has been looking afar for happiness and peace and content, and has never found any of them, because she did not look in her own soul.

She was a restless girl, and she married, believing in domestic life lay the goal of her dreams. But she was not happy there, and sighed for freedom. She wanted to move, and did move, once, twice, thrice, to different points of the United States. She was discontented with each change. She is to-day possessed of all comforts and luxuries which life can afford, yet she is the same restless soul. She likes to read, but it is always the book which she does not possess which she craves. If she is in the library with shelves book filled, she goes into the garret and hunts in old boxes for a book or a paper which has been cast aside.

Never Satisfied

IF she is in a picture gallery, she wants to go to the window and look out on the street, but when she is on the street it bores her, and she longs to go into the house.

If a member of the family is absent, she gets no enjoyment out of the society of those at home; yet when that absent one returns her mind strays elsewhere, seeking some imagined happiness not found here.

I wonder if such souls ever find it, even in the spirit realm, or if they go on there seeking and always seeking something just beyond. It is a great gift to learn to enjoy the present—to get all there is out of it, and to think of to-day as a piece of eternity. Begin now to teach yourself this great art, if you have not thought of it before. To be able to enjoy heaven one must learn first to enjoy earth.

A Busy Day at the White House

By James J. Montague

JUST send word to Ohio, Loeb, to whoop it up for Taft,
Then get an artist and a horse, and have me photographed;
Announce that any army man who can't jump twelve feet nine
Upon his horse may never more be officer of mine.
Write Burroughs that his article on cowslips is mistaken—
Cows never slip—then get my gun and have my picture taken.

JUST cable old King Edward, Loeb, to take no steps until
I get a little time to draft a brand new Irish bill.
Advise the Kaiser that the plans he's trying to get through
To keep his people satisfied and happy will not do.
Inform the Czar that he's in bad—his Government is tainted.
Write Chapter Six of "I and Me," then get my portrait painted.

JUST tip off the Mikado, Loeb, that he had better be
A little careful, or the Chinks will have him up a tree.
Apprise these senile scientists who seek to isolate
The cancer bug that they've not got their theories on straight.
Who's at the door? Taft? Garfield? No! I can't see them to-day.
You say it's a photographer? Admit him right away.
